BULLETIN

Dr. Wm Ervin Presnell, of Canalou, oldest of five brothers all doctors, died about 6 o'clock Thursday evening of apoplexy according to a message received here by Dr. G. W. Presnell who left immediately for that city.

THE EDITOR SAYS—

W. F. Suedekum, of the Cape Girardeau firm of Suedekum & Sons, was a Sikeston visitor Wednesday afternoon and paid The Standard office a pleasant social visit. He is the head of the largest hardware establishment between St. Louis and Memphis and if what you are looking for cannot be found in his line, it is not to be found outside a large city. In addition to hardware, he carries an immense line of wall paper. We were very glad to have had him call.

The man or woman who would not lend a helping hand to a boy or girl who is trying to come back has a mighty poor show for the hereafter. It costs but little to give moral encouragement and, folks, it certainly helps.

Wednesday afternoon The Standard office was visited by a bevy of young ladies from the Miner School, accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. Billy Keith and Mrs. C. W. Smoot. It was the pleasure of the editor to show the ladies through the shop and explain how a paper was made. The following were the visitors: Wilma Hargrave, Vera Shelton, Norma Bohanon, Leona Wheeler, Florence Wheeler, Alvis Howze and Virginia Whitesides.

From the Metropolitan papers it seems the utility people or power and light corporations are the real legislators at Jefferson City. Their lobbyists have beaten every bill they didn't want and have put over every bill they did want.

At least those who were defeated at Tuesday's election cannot lay it on the weather as the day was perfec. The dern liars who were depended on failed to perform.

We think it was wonderful that the Board of Public Works and the City Council gave the patrons of the Municipal Light and Power Plant the services for the month of March free. There was never a time when it was more needed. It is hard to understand why every tax payer in Sikeston does not hook up with the Municipal Plant and keep the money at home.

Something ought to be done about this. A dozen radios are turned loose in Sikeston every Saturday night from stores and shops to attract attention and draw customers. This part is all right, but why not tone them down a bit and shut them off entirely at 10:00 o'clock.

A suit of clothes cleaned, pressed and patched looks pretty good off at a distance and makes a fellow look pretty good. Then a shave helps followed by soap and water. These things cost but little money and should be tried oftener.

To be sure there were disappointments at the outcome of the city election Tuesday. That was to be expected, but somebody had to lose, so why not you. We are all home folks and ought to be interested in our city, so let's carry on as usual and get behind the winners and forget the disappointments.

Wonder how many men's wives will put them to bed when they come home soaked with suds.

Al Dailey of the Sikeston Seed Store offered to trade the editor a couple of goose eggs for the use of his overcoat Thursday when the wind was so raw.

This has been a hard time to write paragraphs. We don't know enough about National legislation to express much of an opinion and are afraid to say what we think of the Senate and Legislature at Jefferson City.

Frank D. Lair has been undergoing a thorough physical examination in Barnes Hospital, St. Louis. He has been in poor health for several weeks and concluded to go to a hospital for a test of his condition. Friends and his family hope he will soon return and regain his usual health.

One of The Standard employees dropped into a place of business a few days ago and was given such a cold reception that when he returned to thaw out, said he'd bet if that woman would set down in a pan of water, the water would freeze.

The Fidelis Class of the First Baptist church will hold its meeting Tuesday night, April 11, at the home of Mrs. Ernest Cox, 513 Murray Lane. A tacky party will b egiven at this time and all members are invited to be present.

Postal Authorities Fail to Solve Mystery of Mail Robbery from Hotels

Postal inspectors Monday night and Tuesday morning failed to solve the mystery of thefts of letters containing money mailed at the local hotels and cafes, although a strong chain of circumstantial evidence was woven around one local character.

For months past, patrons of the United States mail service, and particularly those who mailed letters containing cash or endorsed checks at local hotels, have filed complaints with authorities.

etters containing cash or negotiable items failed to reach their destination, they claimed.

Last Monday night, two post office inspectors "planted" $38.00 in oneand five-dollar bills in five letters. Two were mailed at the hotel Del Rey, and three at Shep's Place on Malone Avenue. One of the Del Rey letters was sent "Special Delivery", the other with ordinary letter postage, and both were "tied out" on the bundle which left the hotel.

The letters failed to reach the train. One of the inspectors caught the northbound Frisco train at Lilbourn, and accepted the packages of letters from the local carrier here. The five "planted" letters were missing at that time. The inspector, however, rode into Chaffee, was met by his working associate, and both drove back to Sikeston where the automobile, home and person of the suspect, were thoroughly searched. No evidence was found which might implicate him. During questioning, he merely stated, "Well, it looks like I'm the goat".

DR. PRESNELL WINS ELECTION; LOSES CAR

Winning an election by a neat majority and losing an $1800 automobile and more than $100 worth of instruments, as a direct consequence fell the lot of Dr. G. W. Presnell Tuesday. His automobile, a 1932 dark blue Buick coupe, was used throughout the day to haul voters to and from the polling place. Harry Shuffit assisted occasionally in directing the driver to the home of certain voters, and about 6:15 o'clock Tuesday evening received $2.00 for his services. He asked to be permitted to take Sherman Jines home, and was told to bring the car back immediately. Dr. Presnell waited about thirty minutes, then went to the City Hall, leaving word for Shuffit to park the car near the doctor's office.

At 10 o'clock that night a group of boys approached Dr. Presnell and asked whether he had given Shuffit permission to drive his machine. They statd that they had seen the youth drive west on Highway 60 about 7:30 o'clock. The doctor immediately called officers and members of the State Highway patrol.

Tanner Dye added a chapter to the story Wednesday morning by stating that Shuffit appeared at Dye's Filling Station about 8:00 o'clock Tuesday evening with a request to fill up the tank. Dye quoted Shuffit as saying that Dr. Presnell had received a rush call to attend his brother in Canalou, and wanted to have an ample supply of gasoline. The gauge, according to Mr. Dye, registered 19 gallons when Shuffit drove away.

The loss left Dr. Presnell in the lurch Wednesday morning since the machine contained four cases, one containing instruments, one "pill bag", a case used in the administration of narcotics, and an obstetrics case. The lot was conservatively estimated at $100, but was worth considerably more from a replacement standpoint.

ROAD HOGS ESCAPE CLUTCHES OF PATROL

A rush call registered Tuesday afternoon by Phone 116, otherwise termed headquarters of Troop E, Missouri State Highway Patrol stated tersely: "Two road hogs at large headed south".

And two troopers fired with ambition, fervor, or whatever else troopers are supposed to be fired with, dashed southward in pursuit. Southward they went as far as Matthews Lane. But no road hogs.

Troopers Pearson and John Tandy returned. Forty yards north of the State Highway Building grazed the two road hogs. Little pigs should not be allowed free range on the 3000-mile Missouri highway system.

MALONE APARTMENTS DAMAGED BY FIRE

Fire of undetermined origin Monday night about 9:30 o'clock, damaged two rooms of the John Malone apartment. Firemen and volunteers used chemicals to extinguish a blaze in a storage closet, and in an adjoining room in which a mattress and featherbed were burning. A door between the two rooms was locked, and in the kitchen an electric toaster had been left turned on. No damage resulted from the latter, however Smoke and chemicals will necessitate redecoration of two rooms in the apartment.

A Two-Holer Burns

Firemen were called to extinguish a small fire at the residence of Guy Carter Tuesday night about 9 o'clock. A "two-holer" went up in smoke.

"COUNTRY STORE" SHOW PACKS HOUSE TUESDAY

Something different was offered patrons of the Malone Theatre here Tuesday night, and judging from the response accorded, local show goers appreciated the stunt. Merchants co-operated in presenting more than 200 prizes, ranging from groceries to bath salts, which were given away free of charge. Sam Graham, the likable Front street barber shop owner, came in late, stood up during the showing of the feature, and more than two hours later, walked out with an order for a bedroom suite, given as the grand prize by the promoters of the show.

BEER

April the seventh,
Is coming soon,
Began to drink beer
And learn to spoon.

A pretty little blonde
And a moonlight nite,
With a bottle of beer,
Is a sheik's delight.

A big mug of beer,
With plenty of foam,
Would make any hubby
Late returning home.

Don't forget the pretzels
They coincide with beer,
They're not a necessity
They merely bring up
the rear.

Beer, Beer, Beer,
Is all we can hear,
But yet we're all glad,
April the seventh is near.

Business College Head Writes He Will Be Here Next Week

J. R. Thompson and associates who recently started a "Sikeston Busines College" here, under more or less unfortunate circumstances, notified Dr. H. L. Smith in a letter written at Kennett Wednesday that he would reopen the "college" here next week.

The letter: "Dr. Mr. Smith:

"I expect Mr. Massey (the instructor) back this week and we will be in Sikeston next week to organize our work in going on with the Business School.

"Yours truly,
J. R. THOMPSON"

A number of students enrolled when the Thompson-Bynum combination first came to Sikeston, paid their fees, and obtained about eight full days' training. Then a succession of unfortunate events took place which landed the promoters in jail temporarily, and closed the school. Advices from Kennett and Caruthersville Wednesday stated that similar schools started in those cities by the same outfit, had folded up. Attention is directed to an editorial "Crooks and Home Folks", an opinionated treatment of the business college racket.

Kids, Here's "Big" News Robert, The Boy Giant, Will Visit City May 6

Every school child in the Sikeston district should begin now making plans to come to this city on May 6, date of the International Shoe Company display to be held in the Odd Fellows building. One of the chief attractions as far as the kiddies are concerned will be the presence of Robt. Wadlow, the Boy Giant of Alton, Ill., who has definitely promised to attend.

Just as a matter of interest, Robert is only 15 years old, measures some 7 feet 8¼ inches in height, and wears size 34 shoes. He tips the scales at 365 pounds, but he's a real boy despite his size and weight. A committee of Sikestonians talked with his father while the youth visited the recent St. Charles, Mo., International exhibit. His father says such visits are quite a trial to the boy, who would rather go fishing, play with boys his own age, fly kites and shoot marbles. After much persuasion, he was induced to come anyway.

Wadlow, by virtue of his mammoth proportions, is the largest member of the 75 Club, an organization of International employees and others, under which auspices the exhibit is made possible here.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Huters and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Denman have made preparations to attend the Friday night banquet in Cape Girardeau, held previous to the display in that city Saturday.

A similar showing will be held in Perryville later this month.

Plans of the local committees call for a banquet in this city on May 5 at which time civic leaders, members of the Chamber of Commerce, Lions Club and other guests will meet with twenty-five officials of the company. On the following day, children who visit the shoe exhibit will receive free souvenirs, and have an opportunity to see one of the most unusual lads in the country, Robert Wadlow. Committees are working on plans for a parade of factory workers, school children, bands, bugle corps and other matters.

Annual Semo Golf Tourney Opens April 30 With Dexter Meeting Sikeston Here

Dexter golfers will meet the locals here, and Charleston travels to Kennett to open the annual Southeast Missouri round robin golf tournament this year, it has been decided by a committee in charge.

Cape Girardeau dropped out of the annual tourney this year. The representatives of the largest city in the district failed last season to take top honors, and this fact may have contributed to a decision to play independent golf, if any, during the season, to quote a member of the district association.

The five teams to compete in the tournament are Poplar Bluff, Charleston, Kennett, Dexter and Sikeston.

George Kirk of Charleston, was again elected president of the district association and Tate Gillis of Poplar Bluff, was named secretary.

Aside from the regular tournament schedule, each team of the district will hold an invitation tournament, at which time other teams will be asked to participate.

Following is the schedule in the Southeast Missouri Round Robin Association:

April 30—Charleston at Kennett; Dexter at Sikeston.

May 7—Kennett at Dexter; Sikeston at Poplar Bluff.

May 14—Dexter at Charleston; Poplar Bluff at Kennett.

May 21—Charleston at Poplar Bluff; Kennett at Sikeston.

May 28—Invitation tournament at Cape Girardeau.

June 4—Sikeston at Charleston; Poplar Bluff at Dexter.

June 11—Invitation tournament at Charleston.

June 18—Kennett at Charleston; Sikeston at Dexter.

June 25—Poplar Bluff at Sikeston; Dexter at Kennett.

July 2, 3, 4—Southeast Missouri open at Dexter.

July 9—Charleston at Dexter; Kennett at Poplar Bluff.

July 16—Poplar Bluff at Charleston; Sikeston at Kennett.

July 23—Charleston at Sikeston; Dexter at Poplar Bluff.

August 6—Invitation tournament at Sikeston.

September 4—Invitation tournament at Kennett.

October 1—Invitation tournament at Sikeston.

JAY COACH HAS TOUGH TIME COMPLETING GIRLS' SPRING TRACK SCHEDULE

Charleston, April 5.—Coach Jno. Harris Marshall today stated that he has been having difficulty in getting the girls track schedule completed. He has been trying to get a meet for April 20, but doesn't seem to be able to do so. A meet with Benton was scheduled, but was called off by the Benton coach, Jeff Sarff, because of a deficiency in girls not having enough out for a team. Marshall has been negotiating with Dexter, but nothing definitely has been arranged. Matthews will bring their girls' team here April 27. The girls' Southeast Missouri Meet will be held in Sikeston, as usual, and will probably be held the week after the Cape Meet, probably May 5th.

The girls' and boys' track teams will open the season with a dual meet with East Prairie, tomorrow afternoon, weather permitting.

Coach Marshall has eight girls anw 17 boys out for track now, the squad having been cut down.

The party who sells beer to baby misses and yearlings will soon be out of business. Don't forget this.

VOTERS RE-ELECT TWO ALDERMEN TO OFFICE; SCHOOL LEVY CARRIES

Two aldermen, E. H. Smith and Jos. L. Matthews were re-elected to membreship of the City Council at the annual Spring election here Tuesday, and two newcomers Dr. G. W. Presnell and Grover Baker were selected to fill the vacancies.

Possibility for a contest was believed for a while to exist in Ward two in the Baker-Mayfield race. In some manner, Judges and Clerks failed to tally correctly, and during a recount of the vote found 46 ballots not accounted for. All of the votes were for Baker.

The City Council in session Tuesday night ordered a recount and final check to be made by four judges, one from each of the four ward boards serving in the election. The two candidates were to select the personnel of the "final count" board, but Wednesday, Mayfield made an announcement to the effect that he would not contest. "The judges in Ward 2 tell me everything's OK now, so there would be no necessity of making recheck", he informed a Standard representative. "I extend my congraulations to my opponent, Mr. Baker, and also thank those who voted and worked in my behalf".

The Council is expected to meet Thursday night to confirm the returns, and to swear in the new members.

The vote on the aldermanic race:

Ward 1—Jos. L. Matthews, 317 defeated O. M. Arthur, 126, by a majority of 191 votes.

Ward 2—Grover Baker 292, Loomis Mayfield 246.

Ward 3—Dr. G. W. Presnell, 320, Gust Zacher 198. Majority of 122 votes.

Ward 4—E. H. Smith 181, O. F. Fahrenkopf 159. Majority 22 votes. add

School Levy Carries

The school levy of $1.40 carried by an overwhelming majority in each of the four wards. The $1.00 levy for general school revenue was approved by 1236 voters, while 221 voted "no". The 40c levy for building fund and incidentals fell down slightly, polling 1212 "yes" votes, and 221 "no" tickets.

W. H. Sikes and J. W. Baker, Jr., running for election as members of the School Board were re-elected. Baker polled 1478 votes, while Sikes tallied 1310.

Barnett Elected Mayor of Morehouse—James Defeats Field of 11

Morehouse, April 5.—Harry Barnett was elected mayor of this town yesterday in a three-way race including W. T. Wofford and Daniel H. Baker, contestants for the position of honor.

The hottest race on the ticket, however, was centered about the contest for City Marshal, until lately held by O. M. Headlee, who recently received an appointment as deputy game warden in this district. W. M. "Snowball" James, now Constable and deputy sheriff, defeated a field of eleven candidates. When the poll books were finally closed and judges finished the tally, James had a majority of 12 votes over his nearest opponent, Col. Farris. The latter polled 192 and James 204, or, to put it differently, James managed to scrape through with one vote majority for each of his ten opponents and one to spare. The count gave Joe Wallace 40, Freeman Caine 19, Henry Fox 32, Ed Murphy 11, Willlard Simmons 17, Lee McVey 2, J. K. Barnhill 1, Frank Marshall 18 and W. H. Harmon 1. One observer in the city maintains that the Farris element including the nine other candidates pooled their influence about 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and swung over to Farris. James, however, managed to draw heavily from his "home" ward, and closed the day in the lead.

R. R. Givens running for the office of police judge was re-elected without opposition.

In Ward I. D. A. Mocabee defeated A. J. Tyson and Charlie Hall for alderman, while in Ward II. Floyd Mitchell downed Wendell Fox and W. M. Griffin.

For collector, voters of Morehouse chose T. A. Teeterman, who opposed Henry Hart. O. M. Headlee and Kirt Yancey defeated Allie Sullivan and Mr. Robinson for positions as school directors.

Charleston Voters Vote But Candidates Have No Opposition; Demos Win

Charleston, April 5.—A solid Democratic ticket, decided upon recently in a primary election, slid into office here yesterday without opposition. A possible exception was the school board contest, in which two members were re-elected. A nine-month school term proposition also passed.

Following are names of successful candidates:

Mayor: E. E. Oliver; City Attorney, O. W. Joslyn; City Collector, Mrs. Bess H. Mulkey; City Treasurer, C. E. Joslyn; City Assessor, Mrs. Elmer Penny; City Clerk, Doss Lee; City Marshal, H. B. Pottinger; Police Judge, C. E. Kirkpatrick.

Aldermen: First ward, C. R. Lutz; second ward, Chas. Stanfil; third ward, Frank Brown; fourth ward, Tennessee Jackson. School directors, Elmer Oliver and Robt. Fowlkes.

TWO NEW MEMBERS ADDED TO MORLEY TOWN BOARD

J. C. Beardslee and R. R. Darter won places on the Morley town board in the Tuesday annual election. A. M. Lancaster and C. D. M. Gupton were re-elected.

In the school board race, R. R. Sullivan and J. C. Beardslee defeated J. R. Lee and J. O. Brashear. Terms of office are for three years.

NO ONE SCRATCHED IN MADRID SCHOOL ELECTION

New Madrid, April 5.—A perfect school election was held here yesterday at the grade school building. Dr. Wm. N. O'Bannon was re-elected for a term of three years as secretary and treasurer and L. F. LaFont was re-elected for a term of three years as director. Wess (Pat) Sherwood was elected for collector. There were thirty-four votes for each, there being no scratches.

COMMERCE ELECTION CENTERS ON SCHOOL

A school board election in which three old members running for re-election marked the Tuesday election at Commerce and brought out a record vote of 230. Those elected were W. R. Beardslee, George Buck and Ben M. Hawkins. Those now on the losers' bench include F. B. Erwin, Henry Sanders and Joe Weber, each defeated about two to one.

The school levy of $1.20 carried without opposition, as did the slate of officers for town offices. Tillman W. Anderson was re-elcted mayor, Omar Clark, Louis Totty and Ward Smith, members of the town board, and Harry Rasbery to the post of city marshal, succeeding G. W. Marshall, who did not choose to run.

ANDY GUMP FAILS TO GET SINGLE VOTE

For the first time in years, Andy Gump, the popular "Peeple's Candidate", failed to tally a single vote in city and school election Tuesday. R. E. Bailey, veteran secretary of the School Board could recall no other election in recent years when Andy did not poll at least one ballot. Is the Andy Gump admirer dead?

Hubert C. Moor, an Illinois school teacher, killed his wife for leaving the kitchen sink full of dirty dishes. Let this be a warning. Now if some one would throw a couple into women who do not comb their hair of mornings, appear with a soiled house wrapper, bare legged and bare footted, maybe fewer men would leave their happy home for those who doll up and smell of scented soap. This is not personal, either.

RUFFIN OFFERS HIS AID TO SEMO CITIZENS

Washington, D. C.
March 31, '33

Mr. C. L. Blanton, Sr.,
Editor of The Standard
Siketson, Missouri
Dear Mr. Blanton:

Having received a large number of letters from residents of Southeast Missouri, and knowing that section of the State is without a resident member of Congress, I am taking this opportunity to say that I shall be glad to serve the people of Scott County in any way I can.

If there is any way in which I may be of service here in Washington, I trust the residents of Southeast Missouri will feel free to call upon me.

Should you care to give this letter publicity in your columns, I shall be glad to have you do so.

Yours sincerely,
JAS. E. RUFFIN

JAMES' VERSION

James Huls, Jr.

There is not a man in the world who looks as miserable to me as one who cannot express himself in pinches. There is times when to blow off a reasonable amount of pentup steam is good for the exhaler and the environment of the aforesaid.

There is a certain young married woman of the Town that, through her own indiscretions has gotten herself in a pinch. Now, with all the regard to the adage that "misery loves company", she is raving about trying her best to indict everybody in the community on a charge of breach of contract, felony, alienation of affection and slander.

The people of the Town talk, as most people do, but they certainly have to have a "starter", and boneheadedness is the best.

The Prohis' Pro to the oncoming beer has about made the doggone stuff intoxiciating. I'm of the opinion, that if there wasn't so much blooming publcity for the legalized beverage made by the kickers the sale wouldn't be so good.

I'll always accept a Prohi's Pro against an Anti's Con for rousing publicity and advertisining.

Group Preserving to Aid Needy Families

By Jane Rogers

IF you are a busy wife and mother, with many calls on the family purse, and yet want to do your bit in helping to relieve distress among the unemployed, here is an excellent suggestion. Persuade a group of your friends—perhaps the community or church organization to which you belong—to meet once a week this summer and spend the day preserving fruits and vegetables to be given to the families which next winter will find in urgent need of help.

The results of your work will prove a real boon. Preserves are high in general food value. The fruits and green vegetables provide essential mineral salts and vitamins. The sugar content is one of the best possible sources of energy. Another important point is that the expense to your group will be small. Both fruits and vegetables promise to be unusually cheap throughout the season. The price of sugar has never been lower.

Below is a recipe for carrots that is well adapted to group preserving activities on behalf of the needy.

Carrots

Wash tender, young carrots and blanch them in boiling water for ten minutes. Then place in sterilized jars and pour over them a sauce made by adding 3 tablespoons of butter, 4 of sugar and 1 of salt to a quart of boiling water. The amount of the sauce prepared may be increased as desired, keeping the same proportions of the different ingredients. Fill the jars full with the sauce, adjust rubbers and covers loosely. Process (boil) for two hours in a wash boiler filled with water nearly to the tops of the jars. Test for leaks and cool jars before storing.

DAY BY DAY WITH GOVERNOR PATTERSON

After all the best thing about President Roosevelt is the man himself. The picture he presents to the country is most inspiring and appeared at a time when the morale of the people had reached a very low ebb.

I do not speak now of his efforts to lift the country out of its depression. For this, friend and foe alike concede his forthrightness, his courage and the determination which has to this time swerved at no obstacle however great.

When one considers how epochal events in Washington have become, how they have moved under the president's direction with such amazing celerity, how precedents have been broken and other precedents established, it is to wonder at the flexibility of our democracy under terrific pressure, and to have a new faith in government and its meaning, a fresh conception of what may be accomplished when the forces of reform are mobilized under intelligent, firm and disinterested leadership.

Hitherto it has been one of the chief laments of observers that our form of government was so constituted that its processes appeared at times exasperatingly slow, that it did not and could not meet sudden emergencies, that its response was so long delayed that it often failed in its objectve.

England was pointed out, notwithstanding all the conservative tendencies of a monarchy, as being more amendable to dispatch in legislative matters. A comparison was instituted showing how in this country the legislative will was spent in controversy and delay, while in England Parliaments and cabinets held themselves to be at once responsive to the popular will, how in our country there were no resignations and no changes in procedure such as occur in England when national policies are reversed by a vote of the people.

No longer need there be any such comparison to our disparagement for we have learned a lesson from misfortune, and the force of untoward circumstances has opened the way for a new dispensation.

It is too much to have the tho't that Roosevelt is incapable of erring, that he is surrounded with an aura of infalibility, but it is not too much to say that in the brief time he has been president of the United States, no other executive has faced greater difficulties or met them with more patriotism or a finer assurance of success in overcoming them.

Roosevelt believes in himself and the people believe in Roosevelt, and never since Jackson's day has such a leader appeared as the man who now occupies the White House.

We do not think of him so much as a Democrat but as an American with a vision so clear and purposes so broadly and deeply national that mere partisan considerations are eliminated from our appraisement.

It is Roosevelt, the man, who in the last analysis is the pillar of strength to his country.

Unlike Jackson, who was stormy, belligerent and intensely personal, Roosevelt is free from passion, considerate and kindly, but Jack never struck a harder blow at the United States bank than Roosevelt has dealt to dishonest manipulations by high finance. Jackson despised his enemies and punished them whenever the opportunity afforded, while Roosevelt has no personal adversaries on whom to retaliate, his only enemies are those of the people. Their offenses have not been against Roosevelt but against the public welfare, and the wrath of Jackson did not more certainly light upon his personal foes, than the gloved hand of Roosevelt's has descended upon the country's despoilers.

None but a pure good man, direct in purpose, could have escaped calamity under the circumstances. Roosevelt is an educated, refined gentleman with a long background of good breeding and culture.

He is honest and has been chastened and strengthened by adversity.

He is a Christian without proclaiming it, an American without bombast, a man without guile or fear.

His character comes first in the estimate of his worth.—Commercial Appeal.

GUEST ARTIST CONCERT

The Dexter Music Club of Dexter gave a Guest Artist Concert, Tuesday evening, March 28, at the Christian Church. The following artists were presented in a very delightful program: Miss Clara Drew Miller, pianist; Mrs. E. H. Orear, soprano; Frederic Claiborne, violinist, with Mrs. Jacob Grigsby and Mrs. Tom Allen, accompanists.

Dexter is to be congratulated on having the privilege of hearing the work of these artists. Miss Clara Drew Miller is well known n Southeast Missouri as an accomplished pianist and gave her usual fine performance. Mrs. Orear gave a delightful concert with a program of well chosen numbers. Mr. Claiborne captivated the audience with his brilliant and artistic performance.

This concert was a feast of good things to all the music lovers of Dexter, and several from surrounding towns availed themselves of the privilege of attending.

Such a concert as this is inspirational to the students of music, and it is to be hoped that the citizens of Dexter will in the future more heartily support an affar of this kind so that they may be repeated more often.—Dexter Statesman.

Use Phillips 66 Gasoline and Save $50 a Year

Phillips 66

If you drive a car, this picture is of vital interest to you—even if you never expect to build a camp fire!

The cartoon illustrates, simply and graphically, what is wrong with ordinary low-gravity gasoline.

Just as a good fire needs paper or light chips to catch the first spark, so gasoline requires very volatile (high test) elements for quick response and snappy action. The kindling corresponds to the medium gravity range in gasoline. And the large logs represent its "heavy" parts.

Combine all these—which is exactly the case with Phillips 66—and you get quick, even, sustained power. Every drop of this higher test gasoline burns clean. There is no knock, no waste. No unused energy blows out the exhaust. No low-test elements resist vaporization and dilute the crank-case oil.

Gasoline made-to-order for YOU

In addition, every gallon of Phillips 66 gives you the benefit of CONTROLLED VOLATILITY. Based on Government weather reports over long periods of years, barometer records, and many thousands of continuous road tests; we scientifically pre-adjust the Phillips 66, which you buy, to your locality and its weather. Hence, this greater gasoline never fails to deliver the peak of performance in your car.

Here's how to save that $50

Now sum up these savings: Without extra cost, you get higher test and higher anti-knock gasoline. Your engine delivers more pep, power, and mileage. It stays fast, smooth, and flexible with fewer carbon-scraping and valve-grinding jobs. Motor wear and tear is sharply reduced. To the average car owner, these combined savings will rarely mean less than $50 per year.

Remember, Phillips 66 gravity right now ranges from 62° to 68°. The difference in results is so easy to feel, that even inexperienced drivers note the improvement.

Get a trial tankful tomorrow at the Orange and Black 66 shield, where this sensational performing gasoline does not cost a penny premium . . . And while you are there, why not drain and refill with Phillips 66 Motor Oil! It is the perfect partner of Phillips 66 gasoline in quality, value, and performance. A guaranteed 100% paraffin base lubricant, so good that we call it "The world's finest oil for your motor."

The Junior Swine Growers' Club held its regular meeting at the school building Friday night, March 31. This was a very rainy night and a few of the members who lived a great distance were unable to attend.

The subject for this meeting was "Care of Sow and Litter From Farrowing to Weaning". At about 7:30 the president, Rees Spencer, called the meeting to order for a short business discussion. After repeating the 4-H Club pledge, all joined in singing the "Plowing Song", after which, Beulah Newman, the Club Secretary called the roll and each member responded by giving a short report that had been previously assigned by the local leader. County Supt. Milus R. Davis, was present and gave a very interesting talk. We hope Mr. Davis can visit our club meetings often. We were also proud to have several of the teachers present for this meeting. Visitors are always welcome to our meetings.

At this meeting, several members expressed a desire to attend the 4-H Club Camp this year. A committee was appointed to plan some way to raise money to help defray part of the expenses to camp. Last year our club was the only one represented at camp from this county.

At the close of the business meeting all joined in singing "Old Missouri". After this the meeting adjourned to the gym where a very enjoyable social hour was spent.

The April Fool idea was carried out in the social hour. The refreshments consisted of sandwiches, home-made candy and punch. The games and refreshments were provided by Miss Appalone Taul, who assists the local leader in our Club work. There were twenty-five members and visitors present on this occasion.

Salads Enliven Easter Menus

By JOSEPHINE GIBSON
Director, Heinz Food Institute

IF YOU are to entertain during the Easter season, you no doubt will want to include in the menu an egg dish, in the form of a hot dish or salad and you probably will wish to serve a salad or perhaps a sandwich suggestive of the season. Easter salads may be quite unusual and most attractive. Below are suggestions for menus for several types of occasions. If you are to have a luncheon as well as bridge, you will find this an excellent menu. The other menu, for afternoon or evening party, also is delightful.

An Easter Luncheon Menu

Tomato Juice Cocktail Crackers Spread with Roquefort Cheese
Eggs with Mushroom Sauce on Biscuit Straws*
Buttered Corn or Peas
Hot Biscuit Currant Jelly
Easter Fruit Salad*
Sunshine Cake with Fresh Strawberries and Whipped Cream
Coffee

Afternoon or Evening Bridge Party Menu

Frozen Fruit Salad* Sandwiches (Shaped using a bunny cutter)
Fluffy Cocoanut Layer Cake
Coffee Candies

(*) Indicates recipes given below.

Eggs with Mushroom Sauce on Biscuit Straws—Melt 2 tablespoons butter in saucepan, blend with 3 tablespoons flour, and add 1 medium can Cream of Mushroom Soup (Ready-to-Serve). Stir until thickened, season with salt and pepper and add whites of 6 hard cooked eggs, chopped, and half of the yolks. Serve on hot biscuit straws and sprinkle with remaining egg yolks forced through a sieve. Garnish with watercress or slices of Stuffed Spanish Olives. Biscuit straws: Roll biscuit dough ¼ inch thick and cut in strips ⅛ inch wide and 4 inches long. Bake in a hot oven (475°F.) for five to six minutes. Serve hot.

Easter Fruit Salad—Chill 6 halves of canned pear and scoop out a small part of the center, leaving what is to be a basket for the salad. Next divide 2 small packages of soft white cream cheese into four parts, and, using a small amount of vegetable coloring, tint each part of cheese a different color, leaving one part white. Chill the colored cheeses and form into small egg shaped balls, using one egg of each color in each Easter basket. Do not color the cheeses deeply. After placing one tinted egg of each color in a pear basket, place it in a deep cup of crisp chilled lettuce, and garnish at one side with fruit salad dressing, made by folding into Mayonnaise Salad Dressing an equal part of whipped cream.

Frozen Fruit Salad—To ¾ cup cooked Fruit Salad Dressing, fold in ½ cup whipped cream, and add 2 bananas, diced, 4 large slices pineapple, diced, and 6 Maraschino cherries, diced. Place in deep tray of refrigerator and freeze until hard enough to slice. Cut into one-half inch slices and serve in nests of lettuce. (This is an extraordinarily good Fruit Salad).

Cooked Fruit Salad Dressing—Mix ¼ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1½ tablespoons flour, 1 egg, ½ cup pineapple juice, ¼ cup orange juice, ¼ cup Pure Vinegar, and cook, stirring constantly until thick. Add 1 tablespoon butter and cool.

It Takes More Than Salts, Calomel, Mineral Waters, Oils, or Laxative Pills to Arouse a Sluggish Liver

They Give Only Temporary Relief From Constipation and Biliousness, Because They Have No Effect Whatever on the Liver or Its Production of Bile

Bile is nature's own laxative and your stomach and bowels require at least one quart of fresh bile every day to keep them clean, pure, free from fermentation, putrefaction, gas and disease germs.

When your liver becomes torpid or sluggish the bile stagnates and stops flowing freely. The contents of your bowels become the breeding place for germs and poisons; your food does not digest—it just ferments and decays in the bowels. The blood absorbs these poisons and you suffer from constipation, gas, sick headaches, biliousness, nervousness and sour stomach.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills will remove the cause of this condition and purify your entire system in nature's way. They are not like any other medicine you have ever taken. They are so gentle, thorough and natural in their action that there is nothing about them to remind you that you have ever taken a medicine, and most remarkable of all you gradually reduce the dose until you no longer require a laxative at all.

Five years ago it was generally believed that calomel and laxative drugs stimulated the liver, but modern science has proved that calomel, salts, mineral waters, oils and other laxatives have no effect whatever on the liver.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills act directly on the liver because they contain two amazing substances which highest medical authorities agree are the only effective stimulants to the bile-producng activity of the liver known to modern science. These substances stimulate and invigorate the liver to cleanse and purify itself through increasing its production of bile. This fresh bile immediately starts to work neutralizing acids and poisons, stopping fermentation and decay, cleansing and purifying the bowels and sweeping out accumulated poisons.

Unless you have tried Sargon Soft Mass Pills you can have no idea of the effects produced by this natural cleansing of your liver and bowels. It makes you feel years younger, stronger, healthier and happier. It brings back life and color to faded eyes and cheeks, restores the appetite and sound digestion—gives you a new outlook on life itself.

Insist on genuine Sargon Soft Mass Pills. Don't be misled. There are only two known substances which will actually stimulate a torpid or sluggish liver to cleanse and purify itself by increasing its production of bile. Sargon Soft Mass Pills contain both of these substances and no other advertised medicine on the American market today does contain them.

By Art L. Walhausen

The affable Major, Beagle Eake, wishes it to be known that there is still room on the "losers' bench". Make way for O. M. Arthur, ? ? ? in Ward II, Otis Fahrenkopf, and Gust Zacher.

Another prodigal son will soon be home. His belongings including two grips and a coupla packages arrived collect this week from Pasadena, Calif. Ditty says he went through one quake or a thousand, and that's enough to deal a Missouri boy the Keely on the Sunny Climate gag for which Southern Cal's. Chambers of Commerce are noted. Ditty Kirby is on his way home.

There's one other thing worth while about the election just past. Up in the Silk Stocking Ward, Jos. L. Matthews actually hit the streets, the ball, and what have you. That boy got out, met the voters, got acquainted with a coupla hundred folks he'd heard about, but had never met, and generally learned quite a bit about electioneering. Congratulations.

Over in Ward II, old bloody two, the judges, the clerks or somebody made a big discovery. Sorta like working for $1.00 per day all your life, and at the age of 89 finding that your uncle Yoseph in Swveden left you a million.

Three recounts, three verdicts, then the climax. Forty-six votes had NOT BEEN COUNTED ALL DAY LONG. A recheck is being made.

In Ward IV Otis needed just 23 more customers with unpaid coal bills to swing the election his way. He lost by 22. You know, it's kinda hard to vote against the man you're indebted to. Ed Smith is a veteran, and being a vet, he knew where, what, when and HOW.

Looks kinda that being a doctor and knowing the wimmin folks has its advantages over making flour. Doc Presnell knew some of those voters since babyhood, waited on hundreds more through fevers and chicken pox, and is darn well liked by everybody. Zacher, with opposition like that, should feel complimented to have polled a normal vote.

The Akron disaster will go down in hsitory as another black page in history as another black page four men were snuffed out in the inky darkness and the storm-tossed, icy waters of the Atlantic. The Akron was the mightiest craft of its kind in the world, but compared to the elements that sent it hurtling to destruction, its forces, though powerful, were as a straw in a cyclone . . puny as are all the works of Man when compared to the whims of the Almighty.

One nationally known editorial writer has termed this disaster "The Price of Progress". Perhaps it was. In another sense, perhaps unjustifiable, it is the price of a barbarian state of mind which arms us to the teeth for supremcy in the air against other nations equally uncivilized.

The militarist insists upon "adequate national defense", and point to the "next" war which, it is insisted, will be fought in the air. Hence justification for the Akron and its sister ship, the Macon. The same attitude was responsible for the Roma disaster, and for the mid-heaven crash of the Shenandoah which sent another group of men into eternity. The ZR-r, the French Dixmude, the Italia, and the R-101 might also be cited.

$5,000,000 the cost of the Akron, plus an additional $5,000,000 for hangars, mooring masts, especially constructed ships, auxiliary equipment, and salaries would have operated Missouri's school system for four years . . or have paid for 2000 miles of high-type concrete highways.

It is a pitiable situation. Nations send flesh and blood to destruction, and for ages past grind out political propaganda sufficient to keep alive the spirit of war. The writer has his certificate in military training, and should war come there is only one answer—serve. But it nevertheless seems barbaric that one nation should be pitted against another for the glory of men, the acquisition of territory, or the protection of property of citizens in foreign countries.

We subscribe heartily to legislation and tax appropriations sufficient to protect our nation against internal strife, but we deplore the existing necessity for guarding against an aggressive nation.

So long, however, as one political unit limits its citizenry to prescribed boundaries, and issues a challenge to any transgressors so long will appropriations for superaircraft for offense and defense be necessary.

We are yet far from civilized.

To those who talk and talk and talk This proverb should appeal:
"The steam that blows the whistle Will never turn the wheel".

CHAPTER X

When Blondie entered the bathroom she was speechless from the excitement of coming face-to-face with Larry. Now she was almost breathless from the heavy perfume and sweet steam of Lurline's bath. She looked around through the haze for a moment getting her bearings, then spoke to Lurline lolling back in the huge tub:

"Who's that good-looking fellow? He started to come right in here!"

"Oh, Larry," Lurline seemed very unconcerned as she gently raised and rubbed a shapely leg. "He's incorrigible!"

"Whatever that means. But he's darn fresh....he said to me...." But Madelon's entrance interrupted.

"Would you like a cocktail?" Lurline asked Blondie.

"Not me, thanks."

"Run along—then—you'll be splashed. Madelon must rub me down with 'Night Kiss'."

"Okay!" and Blondie opened the door narrowly and slid out into the bedroom.

There was Larry romping on the bed with a tiny Pekinese dog. Her entrance unnoticed, Blondie stood watching Larry. He certainly was handsome, she thought, and he must be full of fun, the way he was playing now. Yes he was fresh....look at the way he was tearing up that nice bed What right had he.... Blondie's thoughts were interrupted when Larry saw her.

"Hello again," he said, pleasantly. "Look at this!" and he made the dog sit up. "Cute isn't he?"

"Very," Blondie had at last found her voice even if only for one word and that about a dog.

"So are you," Larry noticed her embarrassment now, and made a definite effort to make her forget it by being unusually friendly.

"Thanks." Blondie could feel herself blush deeply.

"Thank your mother ...thank your father...." Larry was half singing and pretended not to see the blush.

Lurline swept into the room in her dressing gown. She stopped short at Larry's words and the familiarity in his voice. She looked at Blondie's flushed face, and her eyes narrowed dangerously. Lurline knew her Larry. But there was no hint of resentment in her voice as she said:

"Oh, really, Larry boy—don't recline on my nice pajamas," and she pulled him up from the bed.

"Say, I want a word with you—alone," he said to Lurline, and glanced smilingly at Blondie.

"This is little Miss McCune—Mr. Belmont," and Lurline was not too cordial making the introduction.

"Oh, we met before," Larry said, quickly. "Come on—I'll get you a drink."

Lurline turned, quickly stepped into her pajamas, and said:

"I'll be there in a moment—wait in the drawing room for me. Come here Blondie."

"Okay," replied Larry. "Hurry up then, it's getting late," and he left the room.

"Who's that?" asked Blondie.

"Only Larry Belmont—ever heard of him?....stock exchange....smart as a whip....millions....he's self made."

"You don't say—I like him."

"Of course you like him—everyone likes Larry." Lurline was combing her hair, thinking rapidly. Suddenly she turned and said:

"Blondie, I didn't know it was so late—I'm going to let you go now—it's so very late—you understand?"

"Yes, thank you, Lottie."

"Lur-line!"

"Lurline then—it's swell up here. Could I come and see you one day when your friends are out?" Blondie asked anxiously.

"Yes—do. Give me a buzz—it's in the book. Lurline Cavendish, C-a-v-e-n-d-i-s-h!" Lurline spelled.

"Okay—and thanks a lot."

"You can find your way out—right at the end of the hall."

"So long, Lurline. I'm so glad about you," and Blondie's tone showed that she really meant it.

"So long," said Lurline as she gave her a friendly little push toward the door.

As Blondie was about to close the door behind her Lurline called out:

"Here, Blondie, come here!" And as Blondie came back inquiringly, she said: "You can't go out like that."

Lurline stepped to the wardrobe. Sliding the door open she revealed to Blondie dozens of beautiful gowns, hats, and innumerable pairs of shoes.

"Here's a hat," and she handed Blondie a chic Parisian model. Blondie quickly put it on, her face all smiles, her eyes shining.

"Thanks. I'll let you have it back."

"You don't have to," said Lurline a bit patronizingly. "And here's a bit of fur," as she handed Blondie a stunning short fur jacket.

Blondie accepted it with eyes wide and unbelieving. Never in her wildest dreams had she ever thought of wearing anything like this. She dashed to the mirror, throwing on the jacket, and surveyed herself with bewildered admiration as she primped and fussed over the new apparel. Lurline, putting on her diamond bracelets, pretended not to notice.

"You're not going to give me the fur, are you?" Blondie asked incredulously.

"Yes—I'm through with it," said Lurline. Then suddenly her voice changed. "Hurry up," she snapped.

"Okay," replied Blondie, but she couldn't seem to drag herself away from the mirror. She looked at herself in utter surprise. How she had changed, she thought. Then she could contain herself no longer.

"Oh, boy—Oh, boy—I look like Joan Crawford, look!" And Blondie went into an imitation of Joan Crawford: "I'm only a poor working girl, —you cannot thrust your riches on me....' Isn't that good, Lurline?"

"I've met Miss Crawford—she's charming—I've never seen her on the screen though—I never go to movies."

Suddenly Blondie sensed the change the clothes made in her. She felt more self-assured. Her embarrassment and the consciousness of her surroundings were not nearly as great, as she looked in the mirror. At first she had admired the new hat and coat. Now she was admiring herself in them. From somewhere she found the courage to say:

"Lurline, do I have to go? I hate to—it's grand here.' Blondie looked squarely into the eyes of her former pal of the tenements. They gazed at each other for an instant, then Lurline said impulsively:

"If I introduce you to my friends' will you promise not to make any—cracks?"

"Me?" Blondie was surprised.

"Well, about the store and mother—and uptown—and—"

"Of course I wouldn't if you said not...."

"Let me see," Lurline said reflectively. "I could hardly call you a relative...."

"Why not?" Blondie cut in, anxiously.

"Oh, don't be sill...." What ever comparisons between them that Lurline might have voiced were never to be mentioned. From the apartment hall came Larry's voice, talking loudly over the telephone.

"Shhh! Quiet!" cautioned Lurline. And both girls stood silent, listening intently, Blondie's face flushed with excitement.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

There can be no doubt any longer that President Roosevelt is going about the job of cutting down government expenses with utmost sincerity and seriousness. How far he will, or can, go remains to be seen, of course. But he has his subordinates at work in a way that surely is destined to produce results of considerable importance.

Old Question Bobs Up

But there are signs on the horizon which seem to portend difficulties. The President has begun to talk about balancing the budget in ways that have proved erroneous for other Presidents. He wants the budget of "ordinary" expenses of the government to be as small or smaller than the ordinary receipts. As far as that program goes it is not subject to complaint or criticism. But the President, at the same time, continues to talk about bond issues for relief of the destitute and bond issues for reforestation and perhaps some other bonds also. He contends that a bond issue for public construction, for example, should not be considered a part of the national budget.

So the old question again has arisen. If there is an expenditure of government money, raised by a bond issue, is it or is it not properly a part of the budget? President Hoover argued that it was, while he occupied the White House. President Cleveland held the same view. Proposals to pay for the Hoover construction program with a bond issue were characterized in senate debate a year ago as making a "dishonest budget," since it was contemplated that the expense should not be included in the budget.

President Roosevelt takes the position that the course he has proposed places the bond issue in a different category. He considers that government help for starving people is an emergency and that, for the reason it will not recur each year, it should not be considered as an "ordinary" expense. Since it is not an ordinary expense, it can properly be excluded from budgetry calculations.

There is argument on both sides of the question. Moreover, there is certainly a need for extraordinary measures under the stress of the times when hundreds of thousands of persons continue to live solely by charity.

It should be recalled, however, that one of the reasons why the bonds of a good many foreign countries are no longer held to be desirable as investments in this country, is that no one can tell accurately what the financial status of those countries actually is. Their budgets do not tell the full story. The President says, respecting his proposals, that we should look the facts in the face, and that the expenditures are justified. Undoubtedly, his view will prevail in congress, and there will be quite an outpouring of public money in order to do as much as humanly can be done to relieve the distressed.

But from a political standpoint, the program which he has sponsored is looked upon by many observers as leading him into open spaces where Republican fire can reach him. I have heard considerable discussion among Republicans to that effect. After all, it must be remembered, the Democrats are the "ins" and the Republicans are the "outs," and it is very much easier to attack than it is to defend in the great game of politics.

The fear of war again sweeps Europe. The ghost of a "Mittel-Europa" again arises. The treaty of Versailles and the changes it made in the political structure of Europe are almost, if not quite, ready for revision.

War Scares Sweep Europe

Europe has had war scares since the end of the World war. Most of them have been manufactured scares, scares produced for a given purpose. But the very indefiniteness of the present fears constitutes the most disturbing factor that the world has faced since the armistice of November 11, 1918. It is, indeed, no ordinary scare that now pervades Europe.

It was only a few short months ago, certainly not longer than a year ago, that a general war in Europe was accredited as being wholly and positively "unthinkable." Yet, suddenly such a war as that has become "thinkable." The challenge is to European statesmanship, for the statesmanship of the continent is weighed in the balance.

In the last month, we have seen Ramsay MacDonald, the British prime minister, rushing—yes, actually flying—from London to Rome, to Paris, to Geneva. He consulted with Mussolini. He met with Premier Daladier in Paris. Ostensibly he talked about disarmament in each instance. But in Washington there is some lifting of eyebrows about that. Official Washington accepts the reports that the subject was disarmament. But privately, more than one observer looks upon the situation as ominous, as one denoting an impending crisis.

It is difficult for observers here to disassociate the situation in Europe from the rise of Hitler as dictator in Germany. No one is saying that Hitler is fostering trouble. But Hitler as the ruler of Germany stands out there in a way that causes European statesmen to feel something of the same fear known to the small boy who is compelled to walk by a cemetery late at night. They appear to be "jumpy."

Besides, the Rhineland is traditionally a potential battleground. France always has been Germany's "potential enemy." That which France won in the treaty of Versailles through the fighting at the Marne and the other great battles still is considered by Germans to belong to Germany. Then, there is the so-called Polish corridor which was set up. That is neither liked by the Germans nor the Poles, and Hitler has promised to correct that situation. France shakes in her boots at that thought.

That is one part of the picture. Where is the danger point? None of my sources of information have been able to put their finger on it, but they feel there is some specific danger point.

Off the other side of the picture, there is German fascism. It is dominated by Hitler as completely as Mussolini ever dominated Italian fascism. Consequently, it may be assumed that Hitler must consolidate his own political fronts just as Mussolini found it necessary to do when he launched his fascist ship of state for Italy. Further, except for minor moves, Mussolini has refrained from venturing too far afield in foreign matters. This may have been due to a desire to avoid meeting the French in the dark, or it may have been due solely to Mussolini policy. At any rate, it has not happened. So, if Hitler models his program after that of the Italian duce, reasonable assumptions would be that fear of an arising German nationalism is premature and unwarranted.

Hitler's German Fascism

But one cannot overlook the Balkans in any analysis of the situation in Europe. One must recall that the World war was preceded by war in the Balkans. France has continued to exercise her influence in Poland, in Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania. The latter three have been called the Little Entente. No one doubts that Italy would like to break up that arrangement.

* * *

Some observers here, in discounting this new scare of war, feel that MacDonald, of England, is doing a work the equivalent of which never has been attained, or even attempted heretofore. They believe MacDonald is trying to get France, Italy and Germany into an agreement with his own nation whereby the big four powers would rearrange Europe's political structures on a new basis. That would mean complete destruction of the treaty of Versailles, for it was the treaty of Versailles, drafted by our own President Wilson, that parceled out the peoples of Europe into the divisions we now recognize.

MacDonald's Big Task

If that be the end that is sought, peace-loving people must greet it with some semblance of approval in the opinion of those conversant with the ins and outs of European politics.

The recent arrival of His Serene Highness Prince Damras Damrong Devakul to be the minister of Siam to Washington has created some little difficulty for the folks hereabouts who have to know their etiquette and greet the diplomats properly. The minister is a cousin of the king of Siam, so he rates as a prince first of all, but what else? Should he be called or addressed as Prince Damrong, or Prince Damrong Devakul, or just Prince Devakul? Some one in the Department of State is going to find out. Being trained in those matters, the proper title will be ascertained without the prince being offended.

President Roosevelt got a really big laugh out of advice given to his secretary of the treasury, William H. Woodin, at the annual dinner of the White House Correspondents' association. Mr. Woodin composed, among other productions, the "Franklin Delano Roosevelt March." It was played for the 956 members and guests of the association at the dinner by the United States Navy band. After the band had rendered the selection in tribute to the President who sat in the midst of the writers, Jack Bennie, the comedian serving as master of ceremonies for the occasion, addressed the throng: "Mr. President, I suggest that you say to your secretary of the treasury that he stick to his present job. There is not much money made out of song writing these days."

Many housewives use a pinch of soda to keep vegetables green in the cooking, but super-housewives use a pinch of sugar instead of soda, which not only retains the vegetables' fresh color, but adds to the flavor. Keeping the lid off while cooking is also a help.

COUNTY SHARES TAX REDUCTION BENEFITS

The State Board of Equalization, in keeping with the public demand for definite tax relief, has cut approximately $8,000,000 from Missouri's 1933 real and personal property tax bills.

The Board, which is composed of Gov. Guy B. Park, Attorney General Roy McKittrick, Auditor Forrest Smith, Secretary of State Dwight H. Brown and Treasurer Richard R. Nacy, has fixed the final valuation of those two classes of property for 1933 taxation purposes at $3,286,608,425, a reduction of $400,431,711 as compared with the total valuation for 1932 tax purposes. The new valuation fixed by the board is bewteen 10 and 12 per cent under the assessment on which last year's taxes were paid.

It is estimated that the average tax levy for State, County, City, school and drainage district is $2 per $100 valuation and on this basis the savings to Missouri taxpayer as a result of the Board of Equalization's action would be approximatley $8,008,000.

County assessors placed a valuation of $3,428,411,675 on all real estate and personal property in Missouri and the Equalization Board decreased this amount $131,803,250.

The final valuation of farm lands for 1922 taxes is $983,176,274, a decrease of $153,769,399 from a year ago, while the new valuation of town lots is $1,897,238,184, a reduction of $154,922,698. The final valuation of personal property for 1933 taxes is $406,191,967, a decrease of $91,739,614.

Under Senate Bill No. 80 further relief will be offered taxpayers. By the provisions of this measure delinquent taxpayers may escape payment of all penalties, interests and costs on back taxes prior to January 1, 1933, by payment of the taxes in full by June 30, 1933. If paid after June 30, 1933 and before August 31, 1933, the remission shall be 75 per cent of such penalties, interest and cost. The law shall be in effect for but one year, however, and after December 31, 1933, all penaltes, interest and costs will be restored and in effect for the full period of time since their accrual.

Farm lands in Scott County for the taxes of 1933 were valued by the State Board of Equalization at $5,707,656 as compared with $6,568,580 last year. The reduction is $80,924, or 13.11 per cent. Town lots were valued at $3,804,444 as compared with $3,970,512 last year.

Personal property was valued at $1,424,556 as compared with $1,603,904 last year.

Magic in the Salad Bowl

In winter when we are all eating heavy foods, we need light salads to balance them, or, if we are going easy on other foods, we need nourishing salads to keep up our strength. Either way, it is often with a properly selected salad that the successful hostess works the magic that makes the meal. So here are some recent tested recipes for salads of both sorts. The first are of the decorative and lighter variety designed to balance heavy foods.

Dainty Salads

Dolly Varden Flower Salad: Arrange five nice cup shaped hearts of lettuce on each plate. In the center one put mayonnaise. In another place four halves of canned apricots, and in another eight or nine pineapple tidbits. Stone ripe black cherries, and put five or six in another lettuce cup. In the last one place about six watermelon balls.

Lily Salad: Pare and core ripe pears, then cut down not quite to the bottom, thus making six or eight "petals," and spread slightly. Place this "lily" on a green lettuce leaf or on a thin round of green gelatin. Place one and one-half tablespoons of canned crushed pineapple in each "lily," and top with one and one-half tablespoons tiny cubes of orange gelatin. Sprinkle chopped candied orange peel over that. The dressing for this dainty salad should be made as follows:

Salad Dressing: Mix together two tablespoons lemon juice, six tablespoons olive oil, two tablespoons bottled lime juice, two tablespoons confectioner's sugar, salt, pepper, paprika to taste, and a few grains of mustard. Shake or beat until well emulsified.

Frozen Symphony Salad: Drain the contents of a No. 1 can of pears, and cut in small pieces. Buy a glass jar of stuffed oranges, chop one-half a stuffed orange fine, and add, with two tablespoons of the stuffed orange syrup. Add one-fourth cup white grapes, skinned, seeded and cut in halves or quarters. Beat one-half cup cream, add one-half cup mayonnaise and a few grains of salt. Fold into the fruit, and pour into a fancy or a loaf-shaped ice cream mold. Cover with wax paper and the tight-fitting cover. Pack in ice and salt till frozen. Remove, slice and serve on lettuce. Serves eight. Delicious.

Frozen Star Salad: Combine half the contents of a No. 2 can of crushed pineapple, one-fourth the contents of a No. 2 can of apple sauce, four tablespoons white corn syrup and one-third cup chopped blanched almonds. Soften one teaspoon gelatin in one tablespoon cold water, dissolve in two tablespoons boiling water, and add. Beat one-half cup cream, add one-half cup mayonnaise and a few grains of salt, and fold into fruit. Pour into individual round or star-shaped ice cream molds, and cover with waxed paper and the tin covers. Pack in ice and salt until frozen. When ready to serve turn out into nests of lettuce. Have a very ripe firm watermelon cut in small wedges and marinated in French dressing. Arrange five of these wedges around each mold, like the rays of a star. The melon should be icy cold. Serves eight.

Heartier Salads

Chicken and Fruit Salad: Marinate the contents of two 6-ounce cans of chicken thoroughly in French dressing. Add two-thirds cup canned grapefruit pulp, two-thirds cup canned diced pineapple and one-half cup nuts, and moisten with mayonnaise. Serve in popover or cream puff shells. Serves eight.

Chicken, Sweetbread and Pineapple Salad: Dice the contents of a 12-ounce can of chicken, and add one cup cold diced sweetbreads, one-half cup halved and seeded white grapes and the drained contents of an 8-ounce can of pineapple tidbits. Season to taste with salt and pepper and moisten with cream mayonnaise. Serve very cold in lettuce cups. Serves eight.

Lobster Salad en Gelee: Dissolve one package lemon gelatin in one and three-fourths cups boiling water, cool and let get thick as honey. Add one-fourth cup mayonnaise, the shredded contents of a 6-ounce can of lobster, one-half cup diced cucumber and one-half cup diced celery (the last two having been marinated thoroughly in one-fourth cup French dressing). Chill for several hours in molds in ice box. Serve on lettuce with a garnish of sliced cucumbers and radishes in French dressing. Serves eight.

Cleve Robinson made a business trip to St. Louis, Monday.

Herbert Keller visited relatives at Thayer Wednesday night.

CROOKS AND HOMEFOLKS

Again Sikestonians and those living in nearby communities have been flitched—and again by smooth city boys with a clever racket just within the law. We speak of the "Sikston Business College" promotion in which from $180 to $250 cash and about $50 to $75 more in credit was sunk in the past month.

G. E. Bynum and J. R. Thompson were the two promoters. "Schools", they said, "were then in operation in Mississippi, in Kennett and in Caruthersville, Mo." The proposition evidently sounded good to a number of prospects because something like $181.50 was collected in advance fees—representing one-half the cost of the complete course.

Students paid varying amounts rangnig from $5 to $31.50, depending entirely upon the amount and nature of so-called business training desired. Certain course carried certain fees.

And to avoid any stigma of evasion, we hereby include both newspapers and ours in particular, in the list of Suckers. The Sikeston Herald was pulled for $10 and The Standard for $22.85, including cost of contract forms, office supplies and advertising.

Sheriff Joe Anderson recently took a hand in the matter, arrested Bynum and Thompson, and held the two promoters overnight in jail. Grounds for prosecuting were evidently lacking of necessary papers had not been filed because M. E. Montgomery, prosecuting, prosecuting attorney, failed to prosecute. The men were released, and did operate their school here for eight days. On March 27, a sign on the door of the Old Chamber of Commerce room informed students to come back Thursday. Some of them went back Thursday and again Friday. A few returned Monday this week, but even the instructor (who was also duped) failed to show up.

At the time of their arrest and imprisonment the two promoters had $1.80 between them in cash. The rest of the advance money paid by students had been spent, they said.

A Standard reprseentative Wednesday conducted a private investigation. In co-operation with Sheriff Joe Anderson, it was found that the two schools in Kennett and Caruthersville had also folded up, and the promoters, like the porverbial Arab, disappeared in the night. A stack of letters from disgruntled students in both cities make a near file of information. City slicked!

One representative of the class was perfectly willing to sign a State warrant charging Thompson and Bynum with obtaining money under false pretense. But Thompson and Bynum are long gone, and evidently still going. The summary reads like this: Anderson criticised by those now duped for arresting the two fakers in the first place; Dr. H. L. Smith, landlord and owner of the building housing the "school", loser with rent money. Students parted from hard-earned money amounting to about $180; and two sadder and wiser newspaper business managers.

Two or three of the former Sikeston Business College students have expressed a desire to continue the course under the direction of a local teacher, Miss Daisy Evans, commercial teacher at the local high school. They were willing, they said, to pay her what they would otherwise have paid the S. B. C. promoters. School authorities including Roy V. Ellise, superintendent, would gladly assist in working out a solution, and to him we therefore direct inquerries regarding a continuation of the course.

ENDEAVOR GROUPS HOLD JOINT MEETINGS SUNDAY

Walter Weekly, president of the Southeast Missouri District Christian Endeavor Association, Elmer Poage, vice president, Miss Mamyejean Wilbur, treasurer, and Kemper Bruton attended a joint meeting of Malden and Campbell societies last Sunday at Malden. About 160 representatives of various Endeavor Societies were present, according to a member of the local delegation. It is the plan of district officers to hold similar joint meetings every third Sunday. The next will be held April 23 at Kennett, with representatives from that city, Senath and Cardwell in attendance.

Entitled
Christian Science and the Law of Divine Provision

By Paul Stark Seeley, C. S. B., of Portland, Oregon, member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, given recently in Eighth Church of Christ, Scientist, St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Seeley spoke in part as follows:

In a book written by Professor Charles F. Kent of Yale and Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks of New York University, the authors refer to the thoughts of God as more potent than gravity and dynamite. Christian Science is making practical use of these divine thought-forces, and with most beneficial results.

Some time ago Henry Ford was quoted as saying: "You cannot conquer the material plane from that level; you must go up one step into the plane of mind. The conquest is always from above."

Christian Science teaches that the real individuality of man exists as the effect of a power and intelligence which it defines as divine Mind.

As we learn to turn thought to God, the one intelligent cause, first, and let our thinking express more of the thoughts of real Mind, we find our life's work is directed into constructive channels and our needs intelligently provided for.

When we deny matter and evil as real and affirm the reality of God, good, we do so because we are willing to place more trust in God than in matter and evil. It is ignorance of God that makes trust in Him difficult. Christian Science is removing this ignorance.

A Christian Scientist was once confronted with the necessity of making certain decisions to determine a business policy. He was very fearful that he might not make those decisions wisely and that serious consequences might follow a mistake. He realized that fear was that from which he most needed to be free, he saw that the fear was the result of a blind, unreasonable belief that there was an evil power which could make him think erroneously. When he saw himself as a God-trusting man the misconception of himself as an evil-fearing man was displaced. The two concepts were mutually exclusive. With the fear gone, his thought was open for God's intelligent direction and control, and the solution of the problem quickly appeared.

The material sense of selfhood and all its unhappy conditions are the outcome of what Christian Science calls mortal mind, which is the very opposite of God, true Mind, and all His intelligent work. This mortal mind really is not Mind, for it lacks intelligence. This is apparent when we look at its products, fear, hate, greed, cruelty, failure, poverty, sin, disease. Can you associate any of these with intelligence? Of course not. Whatever lacks intelligence as its cause Christian Science teaches is negative and lacks true substance. It does not belong to God's order or to His man. How is this negative mortal mind and its mortality to be gotten rid of? By persistently denying it place or power in thought, refusing to accept its false thoughts or to give them influence over us, but letting into our consciousness only the thoughts which honor God, divine intelligence. Thus we accept little by little the government and control of real Mind and demonstrate our immunity from the influence of any other.

The child struggling with his mathematical problems may fail often, yet mathematical law has met his mathematical needs. In his ignorance he may doubt this, but the fact remains. So the eternally intelligent Principle, Love, has met every possible human need. And Love has met every human need by making immediately available for each of us those ideas of true Mind which, as we open our thought to understand them, displace the wrong thought-condition we call a need. "Truth is God's remedy for error of every kind," writes Mrs. Eddy on page 142 of Science and Health.

Fifteen young ladies were present Tuesday evening to enjoy the social meeting of the Y. W. A. of the First Baptist church held at the home of Miss Vernetta Smith. A short business meeting was conducted and definite plans for a membership campaign were made. The auxiliary was divided into two groups with Misses Virginia Martin and Dessie Hydrick leaders, each group to endeavor to get the most new members. This contest will last two months, at the end of which time the winning group will be entertained by the losing group. Pill friends were also drawn to extend over a period of three months.

Following the business meeting a delightful social hour was enjoyed with Misses Kathryn Burks, Marie Marshall and Beulah Swanner in charge of the entertainment.

The next meeting will be held with Miss Margaree Walton on the evening of Tuesday, April 18.

Charm Strings in Again

Among the earlier-day customs being revived in the Ozarks just now is that of building up a "charm string". In the years following the Civil War the popularity of the "charm string" was equaled only by that of the "whatnot". And the revival of the string bids fair to become once more of equal importance to that of the "whatnot", which has staged a complete comeback.

A "charm string" for the information of the uninitiated, is a collection of vari-colored, many-shaped and altogether surprising combinations of button, beads, scraps of metal and pieces of wood all strung together upon a thread.

Originally the string was regarded as a charm to ward off evil or enmity among friends, and whether or not its purpose is admittedly the same, one hears in the hills the eager question, "Have you anything for my charm string?

The items which go to make up a charm string, however, are considered impotent in warding off breaks in friendship unless the article has been of some use to the one giving it. A pretty button is undesirable if it has not been clipped from some articl of dress worn by a friend. A bead must have adorned the neck of the giver. And bit of colored glass or wood are treasured only if they came from an object originally used in the home of the owner.

Some "charm strings" really are beautiful, and in these days when bright colors are popular, many of the strings would be lovely worn as beads, for natural artistic tastes often are displayed in the arrangement of the articles strung upon the string.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L .La Cour and children and Miss Ada Mays returned Monday from Louisiana, where they had attended the funeral of the former's father. While in Louisiana they visited the State capitol in Baton Rouge, West End and Spanish Fort on Lake Ponchartrain in New Orleans. They also visited in Bunpe and Lake Charles, La., and Laurel, Miss. They drove 2600 miles on their trip.

Senate Passed Bad Bill

The Misouri Senate has passed a bill providing for the declaration of a moratorium on real estate mortgages and deeds of trust for two years. It also provides that all actions for foreclosure in circuit courts shall be continued until March, 1935, when the cases can be disposed of; that the court clerks be named, in effect, receivers for the properties, to collect rents, pay charges and assess rentals against the owners and occupants of the litigated property. The effort to make it an emergency measure failed.

The bill has no merits whatever. Or, if so, they are minor. In the first place the property would be placed in the hands of the circuit clerk as agent, who would have, possibly, more duties to perform in that capacity so that he could attend to the duties the people elected him to preform. It is not assured that the clerk would be fitted to act in that capacity, but this is not the major reason why the bill should not become law. It is not difficult to observe the bill a bad one for reasons else than above.

A reading of the press dispatches regarding the bill may be seen elsewhere in this issue.

The bill would place a penalty on every one who had loaned money on real estate. It would endanger his interest and would encourage shiftlessness and dishonesty.

A borrower who had failed to meet the obligations of the terms of the note and deed of trust; had failed to keep the property insured, the taxes paid or interest paid. Delinquent in everyway or manner. Nothing could be done under the mortorium. The mortgagor had been too lenient, taking into consideration the difficulty the borrower had in any or many ways; some which he could not avoid and others which he could. With values constantly shrinking, interest charges piling up, taxes unpaid and mounting together with the 4 per cent penalties each year and 12 per cent interest thereon, not to mention the risk of destruction by fire with no insurance, because many such loans do not so provide, what could be done?

The owner seeing all of these debts mounting to a point above the value, no repairs or painting would be done. "Why", says the owner, "should I expend a cent on the place when I'm going to lose it anyway. It's not worth my throwing good money after bad. I'll just stick here as long as I can and then move". He'd be foolish to do otherwise. He'd have rent free for two years, is certain, and how much longer you and I can't tell.

The argument that Senator Donnelly advanced: "If the mortgagors had played half-way decent with the farm owners (and small house owners, too, we presume) of this State, there never would have been such as this". The words in brackets are ours as he had also mentioned the small home owner.

Not every foreclosure, by a jugful, has been brought because any advantage was wanted to be taken against the owner. Insurance and Loan companies have, in a large measure, been very lenient with their debtors. Wherever there was any chance of their getting the just amount they had invested, they have accepted it. That has been the program down here. There may have been exceptions, we do not know.

What action will the Finance Department take when it finds that the banks of Missouri are loaded down with farm loans secured by deed of trust? What action will the supervisor or superintendent of the building and loan associations take when he finds most of its resources tied up in deeds of trust? Does the bill propose to break many of the State's banks and building and loan companies?

The bill is a bad one. It should be killed in the House.—Charleston Enterprise-Courier.

These Are Dinners Men Like

By JOSEPHINE GIBSON
Director, Heinz Food Institute

HAVE you ever noticed men selecting meals in a cafeteria or heard them ordering in a restaurant? If not, try it sometime. For the most part, they choose well-balanced meals and they invariably select substantial, time-worn menus that women often hesitate to serve because they are not new and different. Men prefer the old stand-bys well cooked and attractively, but not fussily served! They like meat and vegetables, but it is especially interesting to note men's preferences in salads and desserts. Given a free hand, nine out of ten men will choose either cold slaw or Waldorf salad (apple, nut and celery). Mayonnaise or French Dressing combined with crumbled Roquefort cheese, served on head lettuce, is another favorite with men. When it comes to dessert, pie is popular with American men and ice cream is a close second. When cakes are considered, good old time desserts such as Jelly Roll are popular. Menus suggested here are of the type that men enjoy:

Vegetable Soup (ready-to-serve) Crackers
Escallopine of Veal* Buttered Spinach or Broccoli
Waldorf Salad
Hot Rolls Grape Jelly
Ice Cream Macaroons
Coffee

Swiss Steak* Sweet Potato Balls
Genuine Dill Pickles
Cold Slaw
Deep Dish Apple Pie
Coffee

Chilled Tomato Juice
Ham Roll* Baked Potatoes Creamed Cabbage or Cauliflower
Head Lettuce with Roquefort Cheese Dressing Old Fashioned Jelly Roll

(*) Indicates recipes given below.

Escallopine of Veal — Cut 1 lb. veal cutlets (⅛ inch thick) into rounds, season with salt, pepper and scraped onion, and brown in skillet. Add one 21-oz. can Cooked Spaghetti in Tomato Sauce and ½ teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce and simmer until veal is very tender. Heap Spaghetti on a hot platter and place veal over the top.

Swiss Steak — Add salt and pepper to ½ cup flour and pound into 1½ to 2 lbs. round steak (cut thick). Brown in a skillet with 2 tablespoons fat; then add a few slices of onion, ½ green pepper chopped fine, 1½ cups of boiling water and ½ cup Tomato Ketchup. Cover closely and simmer slowly until done. This may be cooked in a casserole in the oven or in a skillet on top of stove.

Ham Roll—Mix 1 lb. cured ham, raw, and ½ lb. fresh pork which have been ground together twice with 2 cups Rice Flakes, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce, 1 egg, and ¾ cup milk. Pat into a loaf, sprinkle with flour and bake in a moderate over (375°F.) for about 1¼ hours, basting with a small amount of water during the baking.

The Obstructive Driver

(This is one of a series of 14 articles on the causes of automobile accidents, which in 1932 caused the death of 29,000 and injuries to more than 900,000 persons. The author is Professor of Experimental Psychology in Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., and is Chairman of the Committee on Psychology of the Highway of the National Research Council. Other articles will appear weekly.—Editor's Note)

By Dr. Knight Dunlap, Professor of Experimental Psychology
Johns Hopkins University

Drivers have a right to drive at speeds below normal on any street or highway. In driving slowly, however, the driver should keep as far to the right as possible, when there are following cars; thus giving the cars opportunity to proceed by with the least danger.

A great number of drivers operating below normal speeds continuously obstruct traffic and increase danger by driving in the middle of the roadway, so that following cars cannot safely pass. All such drivers need discipling such as will induce them to learn to drive properly. By their methods they advertise their incompetence, and provide good and sufficient grounds for barring them from the roads and streets.

Drivers Who Wobble

Inconstancy of position on the roadway is another type of obstructive tactics frequently observed, which is extremely annoying to other drivers, and a source of danger. The inflexible rule, after having chosen a reasonable position on the road, is to maintain that position constantly; or in changing the postion for good reason, to make certain that no car is in a position to pass on the danger side; and in any case to give ample warning of intention to following drivers.

Drivers who wobble from side to side in driving are, of course nuisances which should be abated harshly. Usually, such serpentine driving is the result of inattention, the driver being preoccupied with gazing around at the scenery, or in talking to or caressing a passenger. Inattention is the greatest single source of accidents, and the wobbly driver advertisers himself as one of the worst of traffic hazards.

Stopping on Roadway

Stopping a car on the highway is always a source of danger, and a great disturbance to traffic. In stopping, the driver should always pull completely off the freeway. If the road border is such that this cannot be done, he should not stop at all, except when absolutely compelled by an emergency. This holds even if no other car is in sight since a car may appear at any moment, and two cars from opposite directions may reach the spot simultoneously. Stops on the road in position hidden by curves or hill crests are especially dangerous. This is a type of obstruction which is not merely annoying, but which jeopardizes the lives of all other travelers.

Almost all obstructive stops are needless. Even with a flat tire the driver can proceed a short distance to a safe stopping place. Most obstructive stops have not even this flimsy excuse, but are made merely to serve the convenience of someone in the car.

JIM THE WONDER DOG MAKES A HIT WITH THE FOLKS IN TAMPA, FLA.

If all the stories about Jim, the Wonder Dog, otherwise known as Jim, a black and white Lewelynn setter belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Van Arsdale of Sedalia, could be laid side by side or end for end they would reach from Miami, Fla., to Maine and back again.

Skeptics of this city which is frequently visited by Mr. and Mrs. Van Arsdale are skeptics no longer. Every critic, and every disbeliever becomes another booster for Jim . . simply because the dog inspires confidence. Seeing is still believing. To make a long story short, Jim and his master spent the winter in Tampa, Miami and other Florida resorts, mainly because Jim suffered considerably from rheumatism in his left shoulder while here last Fall, and the sunny Florida climate was supposed to be good for rheumatics. Get it?

Anyhow the visit has been a howling success. As per an article in the Tampa Tribune of recent date which says:

Jim, the "Wonder Dog of the Ozarks", (he hails originally from West Plains, Mo.), who has won acclaim in newspapers all over this country and Europe, and who will occupy a booth in the hall of science at the Century of Progress in Chicag, is in Tampa, demonstrating to dog lovers and skeptics his uncanny understanding of his master's voice.

A 7-year-old Lewelynn setter, with rich black spots on his handsome white body, and unusually large brown eyes, you will go for him in a big way, if you like animals at all.

Sam Van Arsdale of Sedalia, Mo., owner and master, who has never attempted to commercialize the dog, completely disowns any credit of training, and frankly tells you his history.

Hunts Quails in Bushes

Upon his return, Jim and the master started hunting, and in talking to him in a casual way, Van Arsdale discovered that he apparently understood everything he said. If he asked "Jim, don't you think there might be some quail behind those bushes over there?" Jim would immediately head for the indicated bushes.

This was four years ago. Now, Van Arsdale, the owner of a chain of hotels in Missouri, claims Jim will so anything he says, that he can read French, German or Spanish, translate shorthand and understand spelling.

According to his owner, he is not trained at all. His reception and obedience to directions are purely voluntary on his part and it matters not what he tells hmi to do, he does not fail.

Studied by Scientists

The Paramount Company has made pictures of Jim which were presented to a group of professors at the University of Missouri as an intelligence test for the dog. His demonstrations have been brought before scientists at Columbia University, and Dr. Walter Price of the Psychic Research college in Boston has seen him perform.

But none of them has been able to explain the phenomenal understanding which seems to exist between master and dog.

In a doctor's office in Tampa, a woman asked Van Arsdale, "Could Jim tell if there was a mother of twins in the room?"

Of the 10 or more persons present, none knew that there was, but the dog immediately went to the woman who asked the question and rested his head on her knees.

The porter at The Tribune was standing near as Jim was being photographed and Van Arsdale asked "Jim, if we were going to have chicken tonight for dinner, who would get it for us?" and Jim immediately ran to the janitor.—Tampa, Fla., Sunday Tribune.

Jim is going to bring his master and mistress back to Sikeston right soon. They will visit as usual with Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Van Arsdale, and at that time, provided Mr. Van and Jim can both be cornered at the same time, and that both are in the "working" mood—perhaps a few more skeptics can be convinced.

MISSOURI GOAT CHOSEN MASCOT FOR U. S. NAVY

J. Raymond Dyer and Young Bill

The United States Naval Academy at Annapolis has always had a goat as its mascot. No Army-Navy football game is ever complete without the tr ional Army Mule and Navy Goat. Each is as essential as the visiting Generals and Admirals.

Last winter Old Bill, for years the mascot of the Navy School, came down with pneumonia an' died. Young Bill, shown here with his former owner, J. Raymond Dyer, has been selected as Old Bill's successor. He was sent on to Annapolis last week. Though still just a kid, Young Bill has already shown himself able to hold his own with any mule.

Young Bill, born and raised in Missouri, knows all about mules and how to handle them. Mr. Dyer, himself a former Naval Academy athlete and a winner of the coveted block N, brought him up with mules on his farm in Jefferson County. As Democratic Candidate for Congress, Mr. Dyer hopes after the election to be sent to Washington, where he will be near enough to keep an eye on Young Bill's career as a mule-butter.

CHAPTER IX

Blondie's knees were shaking with excitement as she walked toward the elevator with Lurline. Never in her life had she been in a building like this. When they stepped into the elevator Blondie was filled with awe and felt inconsequential behind the tall, courteous attendant, who silently closed doors and shot them upward with terrific speed.

As they stepped out of the conveyance on the twentieth floor and walked down the spacious hall, Blondie's feet sank comfortably in heavy carpet. They passed in front of an elaborate door which Lurline opened and then stood aside for the tenement girl to enter.

Blondie stepped through the doorway and let out a little exclamation of surprise. She was in Lurline's bedroom and was completely bewildered by the exquisite sight that met her startled gaze. Beautiful furniture, richly colored drapes, appointments placed with a lavish hand by someone with perfect taste, made it a luxurious spectacle that was a fairy-land to Blondie.

She stood motionless in the center of the floor, drinking in all of the room's beauty. Her gaze finally centered on the low bed, covered with an elaborate silk spread of soft yellow. She approached it and gingerly tested its softness. Lurline watched her furtively, with a superior smile.

"Isn't it a honey? Try it," Lurline invited cordially. "Make yourself at home. I'll be back in a minute."

As Lurline went out, Blondie sunk into the softest bed she had ever known.

Lurline hurried down the spacious hallway of her apartment toward the living room. She seemed to glide in the soft, rich carpet. She swung open one of the huge glass doors that closed off the living room from the hall, crossed a low, wide balcony, and stood at the top of three short steps, gazing into the lavishly furnished room.

Lurline saw Larry Belmont and another man seated at a low backgammon table, intent on their game. Larry had the dice, and Lurline watched him throw. A tall, boyish looking man, with a serious, good-looking face, that became pleasantly humorous when he smiled, Larry was one of Wall Street's most successful young brokers. Lurline stepped down into the room, and the other man arose as Larry made his move on the board.

"Hello, boy!" Lurline said, as she kissed the top of Larry's head.

"Oh, Hello. This is Mortimer Pratt, Lurline."

The introduction acknowledged, both men resumed their seats.

"How is your mother?" Larry asked. Did she like the cake?"

"She adored it. Sweet of you to remember. But I'm very cross. Did you hang up or were we cut off?"

"Cut off," said Larry, a little impatiently, without looking up. "Your throw, Pratt."

"Pratt!" exclaimed Lurline, manifesting interest. "Oh! The girls were talking about you the other day in the dressing room. We didn't know whether it was twenty or thirty thousand...barrels, isn't it, you got oil in?"

"Sh-sh-sh," hissed Larry softly. "Your move now. Double."

"Thirty," Pratt answered Lurline, without looking up.

"Oh, tiddly!" said Lurline started to leave. "I'm so glad to know," she drawled as she walked out.

"Nice?" questioned Larry.

"Nice," Pratt replied. "Your play." Larry cast the dice and the game was on again.

As Lurline went down the hall to her bedroom she undressed on the way. She entered to find Blondie stretched out on her back across the bed, her arms wide above her head, drinking in more luxury than she had ever dreamed of.

"Cocktail time," Lurline greeted, and Blondie turned over to watch her curiously. "Every day the same little gang come."

Lurline was undressing quickly now, and the maid entered the room, going to the black-tiled bathroom where she turned on the water.

"Quel parfum pour le bain, mademoiselle?" the maid asked.

"Now, let me see..."Lurline said. "Your folks liked that perfume today, didn't they?"

"They sure did," Blondie replied.

"La meme chose." Lurline addressed the maid, who went to the bathroom.

Blondie watched her through the door with deep interest as she sprinkled something in the bath. Curiosity getting the better of her, she rose and went to the maid.

"What a smell!" said Blondie, taking a whiff from the bottle.

Lurline entered the bathroom in a satin dressing gown, trimmed with white fox, and Blondie stared, fascinated. She was thinking of the old gray flannel bathrobe her mother had made her five years ago, which she was still wearing.

"Vite, vete, je pressais." Lurline was putting it on for Blondie now, taking every advantage of the tenement girl's curiosity and her own lavish surroundings. She stepped lightly into the tub, and said:

"Just a hurried tub, after the rush of the day . . . it's such a comfort."

"Oh, sure!" And Blondie backed to the door, trying to seem unconcerned.

"Le pajam noir," Lurline said in her atrocious French.

"What?" asked Blondie.

"I was talking to Madelon."

"Oh, sure;" and Blondie went out closing the door. She walked over to an elaborate dressing table in the corner and stood contemplating its array of odd shaped, glistening bottles, when the outer door burst open. Larry Belmont entered, walking quickly towards the bathroom.

"Hey—you—Lurline!" he called. He was just about to open the door when Blondie stopped him. Larry turned at her sharp "Hey, you!" and Blondie stood still, her eyes wide with excitement.

"Oh, hello!" Larry said cordially, taking a step toward her. "I didn't see you there."

Blondie tried her best to acknowledge the greeting, but words just wouldn't come. Never had she seen a man like this—why, he was even handsomer than any of her movie heroes! As Larry, grinning broadly now and very friendly, looked at her, Blondie suddenly became conscious of her shabbiness. She felt completely out of place before this well-groomed man, and in these gorgeous surroundings. She started edging slowly toward the bathroom door, never taking her eyes from his face.

"Oh, please don't go," said Larry, seeing her intention, but still smiling broadly.

But Blondie, yet unable to find words for an answer, kept moving toward the door. As she reached it, she turned suddenly, entered the bathroom, and closed the door tightly behind her. And her heart was beating a rat-a-tat-tat!

THE MESSY DRIVER

(This is one of a series of 14 articles on the causes of automobile accidents, which in 1932 caused the death of 29,000 and injuries to more than 900,000 persons. The author is Professor of Experimental Psychology in Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., and is Chairman of the Committee on Psychology of the Highway of the National Research Council. Other articles will appear weekly.—Editor's Note)

By Dr. Knight Dunlap, Professor of Experimental Psychology Johns Hopkins University

Some drivers are able to be fairly decent in straight driving, giving passing and overtaking cars proper clearance, and otherwise operating their cars safely; but never seem to be able to make right or left turns except in a sloppy, and therefore, dangerous manner. Such drivers, preparing to make a left turn, draw over to the right of the roadway, as if about to make a right turn. Preparing to make a right turn, they draw over to the center of the roadway as if about to make a left turn. In both cases, the result is a turn across in front of the following driver, instead of a turn out of his way. Such maneuvers make it impossible for the following driver to know what to expect, and frequently result in smashed fenders or wheels, or torn bumpers.

Another type of incompetent driver keeps fairly well to the curb in beginning a right turn, but swings out over the center of the cross street in completing it. There is no possible excuse for this laziness, incompetence, or too high speed being the only causes. The same driver usually make a left turn short of the intersection center, entering the cross street on the wrong side. In either case, traffic is delayed and disorganized, and the chances of collision greatly increased. In some cases, the messy driver does not actually get on the wrong side of the cross road, but gets far enough out to block traffic proceeding in his direction.

Making Turns Safely

The only safe way to make a right turn is to edge over to the curb on the right of the street in advance, (having due regard to following vehicles), and then to turn short enough to keep well to the right of the cross street. Similarly, in preparing for a left turn, the driver should edge over to the left, reasonably close to the center, and turn around the center of the intersection. Speed should be reduced so that this can be done. At street intersections where two or more traffic lanes in each direction are marked off by white lines or lines of metal buttons, the procedure in making right or left turns is clearly indicated; but drivers should proceed at other intersections as if the lanes were marked off.

After completing a turn, the car should be at a speed lowed than that of through cars on the cross street; hence, to avoid disorganizing traffic and annoying other drivers, the driver should keep as far as possible to the right, at least until picking up normal speed, so that other cars may continue as freely as possible.

A single messy turn should be sufficient grounds for the driver's receiving a ticket to appear before the traffic judge. Repetition of the offense should automatically entail suspension of driving license for two weeks. Several offenses warrant permanent revocation. It seems probable that with lesser severity, a great number of messy drivers will never learn how to drive.

Behaving At Intersections

There are, of course, particular circumstances, sometimes determined by the character of the intersection, sometimes determined by the antics of other drivers, where the rules for right and left turns cannot be maintained. The intellgient driver has no difficulty in adapting himself to these emergencies, which as a matter of fact are compartively rare.

Aside from the making of bad turns, incompetent drivers in large numbers mess up the intersections protected by traffic lights by stopping in the wrong places. Usually, there is plenty of room for two cars side by side; but the majority of drives have the mania for stopping in the center of the roadway, so that there is room on neither side for another car. Succeeding cars therefore must stop farther back, and where a number accumulate there is needless delay in getting off on the green light. The annoyance to another driver is extreme if he approaches just as the light turns green, and he could proceed across, except that a single stopped car blocks the way, forcing the oncoming car to a needless stop, or worse, leading him to pass on the left, far over the white line. Blocking traffic in this way is direct evidence of incompetence, and some way should be found for compelling the drivers to learn how to behave at intersections.

AUXILIARY NOTES

The Auxilary of the American Legion held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Frank Dye Wednesday evening with a fine attendance.

The Auxiliary is planning a benefit card party at the Marshall Hotel Monday evening, April 24 to which all card fans are cordially invited.

At the conclusion of the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Oscar Carroll, Wednesday, April 19.

MORRIS-SIMPSON

Friends here were surprised this week to hear of the wedding of Mrs. Fannie Simpson to H. M. Morris, both of this city, which occurred Tuesday afternoon at Charleston with the Justice of the Peace in charge. Both Mr. and Mrs. Morris are well known here, and are now at home to their friends at their home on Daniel Street.

BULLETIN

Dr. Wm Ervin Presnell, of Canalou, oldest of five brothers all doctors, died about 6 o'clock Thursday evening of apoplexy according to a message received here by Dr. G. W. Presnell who left immediately for that city.

THE EDITOR SAYS—

W. F. Suedekum, of the Cape Girardeau firm of Suedekum & Sons, was a Sikeston visitor Wednesday afternoon and paid The Standard office a pleasant social visit. He is the head of the largest hardware establishment between St. Louis and Memphis and if what you are looking for cannot be found in his line, it is not to be found outside a large city. In addition to hardware, he carries an immense line of wall paper. We were very glad to have had him call.

* * *

The man or woman who would not lend a helping hand to a boy or girl who is trying to come back has a mighty poor show for the hereafter. It costs but little to give moral encouragement and, folks, it certainly helps.

* * *

Wednesday afternoon The Standard office was visited by a bevy of young ladies from the Miner School, accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. Billy Keith and Mrs. C. W. Smoot. It was the pleasure of the editor to show the ladies through the shop and explain how a paper was made. The following were the visitors: Wilma Hargrave, Vera Shelton, Norma Bohanon, Leona Wheeler, Florence Wheeler, Alvis Howze and Virginia Whitesides.

* * *

From the Metropolitan papers it seems the utility people or power and light corporations are the real legislators at Jefferson City. Their lobbyists have beaten every bill they didn't want and have put over every bill they did want.

* * *

At least those who were defeated at Tuesday's election cannot lay it on the weather as the day was perfec. The dern liars who were depended on failed to perform.

We think it was wonderful that the Board of Public Works and the City Council gave the patrons of the Municipal Light and Power Plant the services for the month of March free. There was never a time when it was more needed. It is hard to understand why every tax payer in Sikeston does not hook up with the Municipal Plant and keep the money at home.

* * *

Something ought to be done about this. A dozen radios are turned loose in Sikeston every Saturday night from stores and shops to attract attention and draw customers. This part is all right, but why not tone them down a bit and shut them off entirely at 10:00 o'clock.

* * *

A suit of clothes cleaned, pressed and patched looks pretty good off at a distance and makes a fellow look pretty good. Then a shave helps followed by soap and water. These things cost but little money and should be tried oftener.

To be sure there were disappointments at the outcome of the city election Tuesday. That was to be expected, but somebody had to lose, so why not you. We are all home folks and ought to be interested in our city, so let's carry on as usual and get behind the winners and forget the disappointments.

Wonder how many men's wives will put them to bed when they come home soaked with suds.

* * *

Al Dailey of the Sikeston Seed Store offered to trade the editor a couple of goose eggs for the use of his overcoat Thursday when the wind was so raw.

This has been a hard time to write paragraphs. We don't know enough about National legislation to express much of an opinion and are afraid to say what we think of the Senate and Legislature at Jefferson City.

Frank D. Lair has been undergoing a thorough physical examination in Barnes Hospital, St. Louis. He has been in poor health for several weeks and concluded to go to a hospital for a test of his condition. Friends and his family hope he will soon return and regain his usual health.

One of The Standard employees dropped into a place of business a few days ago and was given such a cold reception that when he returned to thaw out, said he'd bet if that woman would set down in a pan of water, the water would freeze.

The Fidelis Class of the First Baptist church will hold its meeting Tuesday night, April 11, at the home of Mrs. Ernest Cox, 513 Murray Lane. A tacky party will b egiven at this time and all members are invited to be present.

Postal Authorities Fail to Solve Mystery of Mail Robbery from Hotels

Postal inspectors Monday night and Tuesday morning failed to solve the mystery of thefts of letters containing money mailed at the local hotels and cafes, although a strong chain of circumstantial evidence was woven around one local character.

For months past, patrons of the United States mail service, and particularly those who mailed letters containing cash or endorsed checks at local hotels, have filed complaints with authorities.

etters containing cash or negotiable items failed to reach their destination, they claimed.

Last Monday night, two post office inspectors "planted" $38.00 in oneand five-dollar bills in five letters. Two were mailed at the hotel Del Rey, and three at Shep's Place on Malone Avenue. One of the Del Rey letters was sent "Special Delivery", the other with ordinary letter postage, and both were "tied out" on the bundle which left the hotel.

The letters failed to reach the train. One of the inspectors caught the northbound Frisco train at Lilbourn, and accepted the packages of letters from the local carrier here. The five "planted" letters were missing at that time. The inspector, however, rode into Chaffee, was met by his working associate, and both drove back to Sikeston where the automobile, home and person of the suspect, were thoroughly searched. No evidence was found which might implicate him. During questioning, he merely stated, "Well, it looks like I'm the goat".

DR. PRESNELL WINS ELECTION; LOSES CAR

Winning an election by a neat majority and losing an $1800 automobile and more than $100 worth of instruments, as a direct consequence fell the lot of Dr. G. W. Presnell Tuesday. His automobile, a 1932 dark blue Buick coupe, was used throughout the day to haul voters to and from the polling place. Harry Shuffit assisted occasionally in directing the driver to the home of certain voters, and about 6:15 o'clock Tuesday evening received $2.00 for his services. He asked to be permitted to take Sherman Jines home, and was told to bring the car back immediately. Dr. Presnell waited about thirty minutes, then went to the City Hall, leaving word for Shuffit to park the car near the doctor's office.

At 10 o'clock that night a group of boys approached Dr. Presnell and asked whether he had given Shuffit permission to drive his machine. They statd that they had seen the youth drive west on Highway 60 about 7:30 o'clock. The doctor immediately called officers and members of the State Highway patrol.

Tanner Dye added a chapter to the story Wednesday morning by stating that Shuffit appeared at Dye's Filling Station about 8:00 o'clock Tuesday evening with a request to fill up the tank. Dye quoted Shuffit as saying that Dr. Presnell had received a rush call to attend his brother in Canalou, and wanted to have an ample supply of gasoline. The gauge, according to Mr. Dye, registered 19 gallons when Shuffit drove away.

The loss left Dr. Presnell in the lurch Wednesday morning since the machine contained four cases, one containing instruments, one "pill bag", a case used in the administration of narcotics, and an obstetrics case. The lot was conservatively estimated at $100, but was worth considerably more from a replacement standpoint.

ROAD HOGS ESCAPE CLUTCHES OF PATROL

A rush call registered Tuesday afternoon by Phone 116, otherwise termed headquarters of Troop E, Missouri State Highway Patrol stated tersely: "Two road hogs at large headed south".

And two troopers fired with ambition, fervor, or whatever else troopers are supposed to be fired with, dashed southward in pursuit. Southward they went as far as Matthews Lane. But no road hogs.

Troopers Pearson and John Tandy returned. Forty yards north of the State Highway Building grazed the two road hogs. Little pigs should not be allowed free range on the 3000-mile Missouri highway system.

MALONE APARTMENTS DAMAGED BY FIRE

Fire of undetermined origin Monday night about 9:30 o'clock, damaged two rooms of the John Malone apartment. Firemen and volunteers used chemicals to extinguish a blaze in a storage closet, and in an adjoining room in which a mattress and featherbed were burning. A door between the two rooms was locked, and in the kitchen an electric toaster had been left turned on. No damage resulted from the latter, however. Smoke and chemicals will necessitate redecoration of two rooms in the apartment.

A Two-Holer Burns

Firemen were called to extinguish a small fire at the residence of Guy Carter Tuesday night about 9 o'clock. A "two-holer" went up in smoke.

DANCE IN CORRIDORS OF COURT HOUSE SET FOR MONDAY, APRIL 17

The Aubuchon-Alsobrook Post No. 389 of Chaffee announces this week that an Easter dance has been scheduled to be held April 17 in Benton, to raise money to entertain the 14th District Convention of the Legion at Chaffee on Armistice Day, November 11.

A committee on arrangements consisting of Dr. U. P. Haw, Sheriff Joe Anderson, Leo Pfefferkorn, F. M. Mirley and Joe Dirnberger have selected the Scott County Court House as the scene of the hop. Kassel's Girardeans will furnish the music from a balcony rostrum, while dancing will be in order in the spacious corridors of the "temple of justice".

LOCAL WOODMEN ELECTED DELEGATE TO STATE M. W. A. CONVENTION

The following delegates from the Sikeston Chapter of the Modern Woodmen of America attended the County Convention in Chaffee Wednesday: W. C. Edwards, J. F. Altom, V. I. Edwards and C. W. Matthews. W. C. Edwards, clerk of the local chapter, was elected as delegate to the State Convention to be held in Jefferson City, May 4.

DANCE CLUB TO SPONSOR LIDENTON'S MISSOURIANS IN RETURN ENGAGEMENT

The Dance Club of 1933 will sponsor another dance at the Armory next Wednesday night, 9:00 o'clock until 1, featuring Louis Lidenton's Missourians in a return engagement. The price will be forty cents per person, no stags acfor cents per person, no stags, according to Kemper Bruton, head of the Club.

Lidenton's band is a member of the American Federation of Music and has played at the well-known Terrace Garden, at Clear Lake, Ind., and the Crystal Ball Room, Memphis. The Missourians are booked for an engagement in the Irving Cobb Hotel, Paducah, Ky., soon.

CHAIRMAN OF HIGHWAY COMMISSION VISITS HERE

Scott Wilson, recently appointed and confirmed chairman of the Missouri State Highway Commission and Carl Brown, veteran Assistant Chief Engineer arrived in Sikeston Wednesday evening, and spent Thursday in company with A. R. Towse, division 10 engineer and Pat Noonan, chief of plans and surveys. The foursome spent the day on matters pretaining to supplementary roads in the division.

ELECTION DAY JUST ANOTHER TUESDAY SAY DIEHLSTADT CITIZENS

Only 23 votes were cast in the annual election Tuesday at Diehlstadt, but the results were unanimous. Citizens who voted agreed that a $1.00 school levy would again be in order, and that children would be given a full nine-months term. H. W. New and B. J. Merrick were elected for three-year terms as school directors, and Clyde Welch for one year.

JUNIORS TO PRESENT THREE ONE-ACT PLAYS

Tuesday evening, April 25, the Junior Class at the high school will give an evening's entertainment consisting mainly of three one-act plays, "Pipes O' Pan", "With the Help of Pierrette", and "The Gypsy", directed by Misses Burch, McKey and Haw, respectively.

Several car loads of students and teachers interested in dramatics attended the performances of Tony Sarg's Marionettes at the College at Cape Girardeau Tuesday.

Miss Magdlene Moser, who will be the Honor Graduate of the Class of 1933, has been entered in the contest forthe newly created Webster-Sorosis Scholarship at Cape College. It must be won by competitive examination.

"COUNTRY STORE" SHOW PACKS HOUSE TUESDAY

Something different was offered patrons of the Malone Theatre here Tuesday night, and judging from the response accorded, local show goers appreciated the stunt. Merchants co-operated in presenting more than 200 prizes, ranging from groceries to bath salts, which were given away free of charge. Sam Graham, the likable Front street barber shop owner, came in late, stood up during the showing of the feature, and more than two hours later, walked out with an order for a bedroom suite, given as the grand prize by the promoters of the show.

BEER

April the seventh,
Is coming soon,
Began to drink beer
And learn to spoon.

A pretty little blonde
And a moonlight nite,
With a bottle of beer,
Is a sheik's delight.

A big mug of beer,
With plenty of foam,
Would make any hubby
Late returning home.

Don't forget the pretzels
They coincide with beer,
They're not a necessity
They merely bring up
the rear.

Beer, Beer, Beer,
Is all we can hear,
But yet we're all glad,
April the seventh is near.

Business College Head Writes He Will Be Here Next Week

J. R. Thompson and associates who recently started a "Sikeston Busines College" here, under more or less unfortunate circumstances, notified Dr. H. L. Smith in a letter written at Kennett Wednesday that he would reopen the "college" here next week.

The letter: "Dr. Mr. Smith:
"I expect Mr. Massey (the instructor) back this week and we will be in Sikeston next week to organize our work in going on with the Business School.
"Yours truly,
J. R. THOMPSON"

A number of students enrolled when the Thompson-Bynum combination first came to Sikeston, paid their fees, and obtained about eight full days' training. Then a succession of unfortunate events took place which landed the promoters in jail temporarily, and closed the school. Advices from Kennett and Caruthersville Wednesday stated that similar schools started in those cities by the same outfit, had folded up. Attention is directed to an editorial "Crooks and Home Folks", an opinionated treatment of the business college racket.

Kids, Here's "Big" News Robert, The Boy Giant, Will Visit City May 6

Every school child in the Sikeston district should begin now making plans to come to this city on May 6, date of the International Shoe Company display to be held in the Odd Fellows building. One of the chief attractions as far as the kiddies are concerned will be the presence of Robt. Wadlow, the Boy Giant of Alton, Ill., who has definitely promised to attend.

Just as a matter of interest, Robert is only 15 years old, measures some 7 feet 8¼ inches in height, and wears size 34 shoes. He tips the scales at 365 pounds, but he's a real boy despite his size and weight. A committee of Sikestonians talked with his father while the youth visited the recent St. Charles, Mo., International exhibit. His father says such visits are quite a trial to the boy, who would rather go fishing, play with boys his own age, fly kites and shoot marbles. After much persuasion, he was induced to come anyway.

Wadlow, by virtue of his mammoth proportions, is the largest member of the 75 Club, an organization of International employees and others, under which auspices the exhibit is made possible here.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Huters and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Denman have made preparations to attend the Friday night banquet in Cape Girardeau, held previous to the display in that city Saturday.

A similar showing will be held in Perryville later this month.

Plans of the local committees call for a banquet in this city on May 5 at which time civic leaders, members of the Chamber of Commerce, Lions Club and other guests will meet with twenty-five officials of the company. On the following day, children who visit the shoe exhibit will receive free souvenirs, and have an opportunity to see one of the most unusual lads in the country, Robert Wadlow. Committees are working on plans for a parade of factory workers, school children, bands, bugle corps and other matters.

Annual Semo Golf Tourney Opens April 30 With Dexter Meeting Sikeston Here

Dexter golfers will meet the locals here, and Charleston travels to Kennett to open the annual Southeast Missouri round robin golf tournament this year, it has been decided by a committee in charge.

Cape Girardeau dropped out of the annual tourney this year. The representatives of the largest city in the district failed last season to take top honors, and this fact may have contributed to a decision to play independent golf, if any, during the season, to quote a member of the district association.

The five teams to compete in the tournament are Poplar Bluff, Charleston, Kennett, Dexter and Sikeston.

George Kirk of Charleston, was again elected president of the district association and Tate Gillis of Poplar Bluff, was named secretary.

Aside from the regular tournament schedule, each team of the district will hold an invitation tournament, at which time other teams will be asked to participate.

Following is the schedule in the Southeast Missouri Round Robin Association:

April 30—Charleston at Kennett; Dexter at Sikeston.

May 7—Kennett at Dexter; Sikeston at Poplar Bluff.

May 14—Dexter at Charleston; Poplar Bluff at Kennett.

JAY COACH HAS TOUGH TIME COMPLETING GIRLS' SPRING TRACK SCHEDULE

Charleston, April 5.—Coach Jno. Harris Marshall today stated that he has been having difficulty in getting the girls track schedule completed. He has been trying to get a meet for April 20, but doesn't seem to be able to do so. A meet with Benton was scheduled, but was called off by the Benton coach, Jeff Sarff, because of a deficiency in girls not having enough out for a team. Marshall has been negotiating with Dexter, but nothing definitely has been arranged. Matthews will bring their girls' team here April 27. The girls' Southeast Missouri Meet will be held in Sikeston, as usual, and will probably be held the week after the Cape Meet, probably May 5th.

The girls' and boys' track teams will open the season with a dual meet with East Prairie, tomorrow afternoon, weather permitting.

Coach Marshall has eight girls anw 17 boys out for track now, the squad having been cut down.

The party who sells beer to baby misses and yearlings will soon be out of business. Don't forget this.

VOTERS RE-ELECT TWO ALDERMEN TO OFFICE; SCHOOL LEVY CARRIES

Two aldermen, E. H. Smith and Jos. L. Matthews were re-elected to membreship of the City Council at the annual Spring election here Tuesday, and two newcomers Dr. G. W. Presnell and Grover Baker were selected to fill the vacancies.

Possibility for a contest was believed for a while to exist in Ward two in the Baker-Mayfield race. In some manner, Judges and Clerks failed to tally correctly, and during a recount of the vote found 46 ballots not accounted for. All of the votes were for Baker.

The City Council in session Tuesday night ordered a recount and final check to be made by four judges, one from each of the four ward boards serving in the election. The two candidates were to select the personnel of the "final count" board, but Wednesday, Mayfield made an announcement to the effect that he would not contest. "The judges in Ward 2 tell me everything's OK now, so there would be no necessity of making recheck", he informed a Standard representative. "I extend my congraulations to my opponent, Mr. Baker, and also thank those who voted and worked in my behalf".

The Council is expected to meet Thursday night to confirm the returns, and to swear in the new members.

The vote on the aldermanic race:

Ward 1—Jos. L. Matthews, 317 defeated O. M. Arthur, 126, by a majority of 191 votes.

Ward 2—Grover Baker 292, Loomis Mayfield 246.

Ward 3—Dr. G. W. Presnell, 320, Gust Zacher 198. Majority of 122 votes.

Ward 4—E. H. Smith 181, O. F. Fahrenkopf 159. Majority 22 votes. add

School Levy Carries

The school levy of $1.40 carried by an overwhelming majority in each of the four wards. The $1.00 levy for general school revenue was approved by 1236 voters, while 221 voted "no". The 40c levy for building fund and incidentals fell down slightly, polling 1212 "yes" votes, and 221 "no" tickets.

W. H. Sikes and J. W. Baker, Jr., running for election as members of the School Board were re-elected. Baker polled 1478 votes, while Sikes tallied 1310.

Barnett Elected Mayor of Morehouse—James Defeats Field of 11

Morehouse, April 5.—Harry Barnett was elected mayor of this town yesterday in a three-way race including W. T. Wofford and Daniel H. Baker, contestants for the position of honor.

The hottest race on the ticket, however, was centered about the contest for City Marshal, until lately held by O. M. Headlee, who recently received an appointment as deputy game warden in this district. W. M. "Snowball" James, now Constable and deputy sheriff, defeated a field of eleven candidates. When the poll books were finally closed and judges finished the tally, James had a majority of 12 votes over his nearest opponent, Col. Farris. The latter polled 192 and James 204, or, to put it differently, James managed to scrape through with one vote majority for each of his ten opponents and one to spare. The count gave Joe Wallace 40, Freeman Caine 19, Henry Fox 32, Ed Murphy 11, Willlard Simmons 17, Lee McVey 2, J. K. Barnhill 1, Frank Marshall 18 and W. H. Harmon 1. One observer in the city maintains that the Farris element including the nine other candidates pooled their influence about 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and swung over to Farris. James, however, managed to draw heavily from his "home" ward, and closed the day in the lead.

R. R. Givens running for the office of police judge was re-elected without opposition.

In Ward I. D. A. Mocabee defeated A. J. Tyson and Charlie Hall for alderman, while in Ward II. Floyd Mitchell downed Wendell Fox and W. M. Griffin.

For collector, voters of Morehouse chose T. A. Teeterman, who opposed Henry Hart. O. M. Headlee and Kirt Yancey defeated Allie Sullivan and Mr. Robinson for positions as school directors.

Charleston Voters Vote But Candidates Have No Opposition; Demos Win

Charleston, April 5.—A solid Democratic ticket, decided upon recently in a primary election, slid into office here yesterday without opposition. A possible exception was the school board contest, in which two members were re-elected. A nine-month school term proposition also passed.

Following are names of successful candidates:

Mayor: E. E. Oliver; City Attorney, O. W. Joslyn; City Collector, Mrs. Bess H. Mulkey; City Treasurer, C. E. Joslyn; City Assessor, Mrs. Elmer Penny; City Clerk, Doss Lee; City Marshal, H. B. Pottinger; Police Judge, C. E. Kirkpatrick.

Aldermen: First ward, C. R. Lutz; second ward, Chas. Stanfil; third ward, Frank Brown; fourth ward, Tennessee Jackson. School directors, Elmer Oliver and Robt. Fowlkes.

TWO NEW MEMBERS ADDED TO MORLEY TOWN BOARD

J. C. Beardslee and R. R. Darter won places on the Morley town board in the Tuesday annual election. A. M. Lancaster and C. D. M. Gupton were re-elected.

In the school board race, R. R. Sullivan and J. C. Beardslee defeated J. R. Lee and J. O. Brashear. Terms of office are for three years.

NO ONE SCRATCHED IN MADRID SCHOOL ELECTION

New Madrid, April 5.—A perfect school election was held here yesterday at the grade school building. Dr. Wm. N. O'Bannon was re-elected for a term of three years as secretary and treasurer and L. F. LaFont was re-elected for a term of three years as director. Wess (Pat) Sherwood was elected for collector. There were thirty-four votes for each, there being no scratches.

COMMERCE ELECTION CENTERS ON SCHOOL

A school board election in which three old members running for re-election marked the Tuesday election at Commerce and brought out a record vote of 230. Those elected were W. R. Beardslee, George Buck and Ben M. Hawkins. Those now on the losers' bench include F. B. Erwin, Henry Sanders and Joe Weber, each defeated about two to one.

The school levy of $1.20 carried without opposition, as did the slate of officers for town offices. Tillman W. Anderson was re-elected mayor, Omar Clark, Louis Totty and Ward Smith, members of the town board, and Harry Rasbery to the post of city marshal, succeeding G. W. Marshall, who did not choose to run.

ANDY GUMP FAILS TO GET SINGLE VOTE

For the first time in years, Andy Gump, the popular "Peeple's Candidate", failed to tally a single vote in city and school election Tuesday. R. E. Bailey, veteran secretary of the School Board could recall no other election in recent years when Andy did not poll at least one ballot. Is the Andy Gump admirer dead?

Hubert C. Moor, an Illinois school teacher, killed his wife for leaving the kitchen sink full of dirty dishes. Let this be a warning. Now if some one would throw a spell into women who do not comb their hair of mornings, appear with a soiled house wrapper, bare legged and bare footted, maybe fewer men would leave their happy home for those who doll up and smell of scented soap. This is not personal, either.

RUFFIN OFFERS HIS AID TO SEMO CITIZENS

Washington, D. C.
March 31, '33

Mr. C. L. Blanton, Sr.,
Editor of The Standard
Siketson, Missouri
Dear Mr. Blanton:

Having received a large number of letters from residents of Southeast Missouri, and knowing that section of the State is without a resident member of Congress, I am taking this opportunity to say that I shall be glad to serve the people of Scott County in any way I can.

If there is any way in which I may be of service here in Washington, I trust the residents of Southeast Missouri will feel free to call upon me.

Should you care to give this letter publicity in your columns, I shall be glad to have you do so.

Yours sincerely,
JAS. E. RUFFIN

JAMES' VERSION

James Huls, Jr.

There is not a man in the world who looks as miserable to me as one who cannot express himself in pinches. There is times when to blow off a reasonable amount of pentup steam is good for the exhaler and the environment of the aforesaid.

There is a certain young married woman of the Town that, through her own indiscretions has gotten herself in a pinch. Now, with all the regard to the adage that "misery loves company", she is raving about trying her best to indict everybody in the community on a charge of breach of contract, felony, alienation of affection and slander.

The people of the Town talk, as most people do, but they certainly have to have a "starter", and boneheadedness is the best.

The Prohis' Pro to the oncoming beer has about made the doggone stuff intoxiciating. I'm of the opinion, that if there wasn't so much blooming publcity for the legalized beverage made by the kickers the sale wouldn't be so good.

I'll always accept a Prohi's Pro against an Anti's Con for rousing publicity and advertisining.

Group Preserving to Aid Needy Families

By Jane Rogers

IF you are a busy wife and mother, with many calls on the family purse, and yet want to do your bit in helping to relieve distress among the unemployed, here is an excellent suggestion. Persuade a group of your friends—perhaps the community or church organization to which you belong—to meet once a week this summer and spend the day preserving fruits and vegetables to be given to the families which next winter will find in urgent need of help.

The results of your work will prove a real boon. Preserves are high in general food value. The fruits and green vegetables provide essential mineral salts and vitamins. The sugar content is one of the best possible sources of energy. Another important point is that the expense to your group will be small. Both fruits and vegetables promise to be unusually cheap throughout the season. The price of sugar has never been lower.

Below is a recipe for carrots that is well adapted to group preserving activities on behalf of the needy.

Carrots

Wash tender, young carrots and blanch them in boiling water for ten minutes. Then place in sterilized jars and pour over them a sauce made by adding 3 tablespoons of butter, 4 of sugar and 1 of salt to a quart of boiling water. The amount of the sauce prepared may be increased as desired, keeping the same proportions of the different ingredients. Fill the jars full with the sauce, adjust rubbers and covers loosely. Process (boil) for two hours in a wash boiler filled with water nearly to the tops of the jars. Test for leaks and cool jars before storing.

DAY BY DAY WITH GOVERNOR PATTERSON

After all the best thing about President Roosevelt is the man himself. The picture he presents to the country is most inspiring and appeared at a time when the morale of the people had reached a very low ebb.

I do not speak now of his efforts to lift the country out of its depression. For this, friend and foe alike concede his forthrightness, his courage and the determination which has to this time swerved at no obstacle however great.

When one considers how epochal events in Washington have become, how they have moved under the president's direction with such amazing celerity, how precedents have been broken and other precedents established, it is to wonder at the flexibility of our democracy under terrific pressure, and to have a new faith in government and its meaning, a fresh conception of what may be accomplished when the forces of reform are mobilized under intelligent, firm and disinterested leadership.

Hitherto it has been one of the chief laments of observers that our form of government was so constituted that its processes appeared at times exasperatingly slow, that it did not and could not meet sudden emergencies, that its response was so long delayed that it often failed in its objective.

England was pointed out, notwithstanding all the conservative tendencies of a monarchy, as being more amendable to dispatch in legislative matters. A comparison was instituted showing how in this country the legislative will was spent in controversy and delay, while in England Parliaments and cabinets held themselves to be at once responsive to the popular will, how in our country there were no resignations and no changes in procedure such as occur in England when national policies are reversed by a vote of the people.

No longer need there be any such comparison to our disparagement for we have learned a lesson from misfortune, and the force of untoward circumstances has opened the way for a new dispensation.

It is too much to have the tho't that Roosevelt is incapable of erring, that he is surrounded with an aura of infalibility, but it is not too much to say that in the brief time he has been president of the United States, no other executive has faced greater difficulties or met them with more patriotism or a finer assurance of success in overcoming them.

Roosevelt believes in himself and the people believe in Roosevelt, and never since Jackson's day has such a leader appeared as the man who now occupies the White House.

We do not think of him so much as a Democrat but as an American with a vision so clear and purposes so broadly and deeply national that mere partisan considerations are eliminated from our appraisement.

It is Roosevelt, the man, who in the last analysis is the pillar of strength to his country.

Unlike Jackson, who was stormy, belligerent and intensely personal, Roosevelt is free from passion, considerate and kindly, but Jackson never struck a harder blow at the United States bank than Roosevelt has dealt to dishonest manipulations by high finance. Jackson despised his enemies and punished them whenever the opportunity afforded, while Roosevelt has no personal adversaries on whom to retaliate, his only enemies are those of the people. Their offenses have not been against Roosevelt but against the public welfare, and the wrath of Jackson did not more certainly light upon his personal foes, than the gloved hand of Roosevelt's has descended upon the country's despoilers.

None but a pure good man, direct in purpose, could have escaped calamity under the circumstances. Roosevelt is an educated, refined gentleman with a long background of good breeding and culture.

He is honest and has been chastened and strengthened by adversity.

He is a Christian without proclaiming it, an American without bombast, a man without guile or fear.

His character comes first in the estimate of his worth.—Commercial Appeal.

GUEST ARTIST CONCERT

The Dexter Music Club of Dexter gave a Guest Artist Concert, Tuesday evening, March 28, at the Christian Church. The following artists were presented in a very delightful program: Miss Clara Drew Miller, pianist; Mrs. E. H. Orear, soprano; Frederic Claiborne, violinist, with Mrs. Jacob Grigsby and Mrs. Tom Allen, accompanists.

Dexter is to be congratulated on having the privilege of hearing the work of these artists. Miss Clara Drew Miller is well known n Southeast Missouri as an accomplished pianist and gave her usual fine performance. Mrs. Orear gave a delightful concert with a program of well chosen numbers. Mr. Claiborne captivated the audience with his brilliant and artistic performance.

This concert was a feast of good things to all the music lovers of Dexter, and several from surrounding towns availed themselves of the privilege of attending.

Such a concert as this is inspirational to the students of music, and it is to be hoped that the citizens of Dexter will in the future more heartily support an affar of this kind so that they may be repeated more often.—Dexter Statesman.

Use Phillips 66 Gasoline and Save $50 a Year

Phillips 66

If you drive a car, this picture is of vital interest to you—even if you never expect to build a camp fire!

The cartoon illustrates, simply and graphically, what is wrong with ordinary low-gravity gasoline.

Just as a good fire needs paper or light chips to catch the first spark, so gasoline requires very volatile (high test) elements for quick response and snappy action. The kindling corresponds to the medium gravity range in gasoline. And the large logs represent its "heavy" parts.

Combine all these—which is exactly the case with Phillips 66—and you get quick, even, sustained power. Every drop of this higher test gasoline burns clean. There is no knock, no waste. No unused energy blows out the exhaust. No low-test elements resist vaporization and dilute the crank-case oil.

Gasoline made-to-order for YOU

In addition, every gallon of Phillips 66 gives you the benefit of CONTROLLED VOLATILITY. Based on Government weather reports over long periods of years, barometer records, and many thousands of continuous road tests; we scientifically pre-adjust the Phillips 66, which you buy, to your locality and its weather. Hence, this greater gasoline never fails to deliver the peak of performance in your car.

Here's how to save that $50

Now sum up these savings: Without extra cost, you get higher test and higher anti-knock gasoline. Your engine delivers more pep, power, and mileage. It stays fast, smooth, and flexible with fewer carbon-scraping and valve-grinding jobs. Motor wear and tear is sharply reduced. To the average car owner, these combined savings will rarely mean less than $50 per year.

Remember, Phillips 66 gravity right now ranges from 62° to 68°. The difference in results is so easy to feel, that even inexperienced drivers note the improvement.

Get a trial tankful tomorrow at the Orange and Black 66 shield, where this sensational performing gasoline does not cost a penny premium . . . And while you are there, why not drain and refill with Phillips 66 Motor Oil! It is the perfect partner of Phillips 66 gasoline in quality, value, and performance. A guaranteed 100% paraffin base lubricant, so good that we call it "The world's finest oil for your motor."

"HIGHEST TEST" at the price of ordinary gasoline

Phillips Ethyl — Also Phillips 66 Ethyl at the regular price of Ethyl Gasoline

UNIQUE — A gasoline of U.S. Motor grade at a competitive price

Phillips MOTOR 66 OIL — "CHEAP" OILS ARE COSTLY. You make certain of more miles of real protection with this scientific motor oil. It is simply the finest lubricant which the great Phillips organization can produce. There is a grade specially engineered for every motor. 31¢ a quart.

The Junior Swine Growers' Club held its regular meeting at the school building Friday night, March 31. This was a very rainy night and a few of the members who lived a great distance were unable to attend.

The subject for this meeting was "Care of Sow and Litter From Farrowing to Weaning". At about 7:30 the president, Rees Spencer, called the meeting to order for a short business discussion. After repeating the 4-H Club pledge, all joined in singing the "Plowing Song", after which, Beulah Newman, the Club Secretary called the roll and each member responded by giving a short report that had been previously assigned by the local leader. County Supt. Milus R. Davis, was present and gave a very interesting talk. We hope Mr. Davis can visit our club meetings often. We were also proud to have several of the teachers present for this meeting. Visitors are always welcome to our meetings.

At this meeting, several members expressed a desire to attend the 4-H Club Camp this year. A committee was appointed to plan some way to raise money to help defray part of the expenses to camp. Last year our club was the only one represented at camp from this county.

At the close of the business meeting all joined in singing "Old Missouri". After this the meeting adjourned to the gym where a very enjoyable social hour was spent.

The April Fool idea was carried out in the social hour. The refreshments consisted of sandwiches, home-made candy and punch. The games and refreshments were provided by Miss Appalone Taul, who assists the local leader in our Club work. There were twenty-five members and visitors present on this occasion.

Salads Enliven Easter Menus

By JOSEPHINE GIBSON
Director, Heinz Food Institute

IF YOU are to entertain during the Easter season, you no doubt will want to include in the menu an egg dish, in the form of a hot dish or salad and you probably will wish to serve a salad or perhaps a sandwich suggestive of the season. Easter salads may be quite unusual and most attractive. Below are suggestions for menus for several types of occasions. If you are to have a luncheon as well as bridge, you will find this an excellent menu. The other menu, for afternoon or evening party, also is delightful.

An Easter Luncheon Menu

Tomato Juice Cocktail Crackers Spread with Roquefort Cheese
Eggs with Mushroom Sauce on Biscuit Straws*
Buttered Corn or Peas
Hot Biscuit Currant Jelly
Easter Fruit Salad*
Sunshine Cake with Fresh Strawberries and Whipped Cream
Coffee

Afternoon or Evening Bridge Party Menu

Frozen Fruit Salad* Sandwiches (Shaped using a bunny cutter)
Fluffy Cocoanut Layer Cake
Coffee Candies

(*) Indicates recipes given below.

Eggs with Mushroom Sauce on Biscuit Straws—Melt 2 tablespoons butter in saucepan, blend with 3 tablespoons flour, and add 1 medium can Cream of Mushroom Soup (Ready-to-Serve). Stir until thickened, season with salt and pepper and add whites of 6 hard cooked eggs, chopped, and half of the yolks. Serve on hot biscuit straws and sprinkle with remaining egg yolks forced through a sieve. Garnish with watercress or slices of Stuffed Spanish Olives. Biscuit straws: Roll biscuit dough ¼ inch thick and cut in strips ⅓ inch wide and 4 inches long. Bake in a hot oven (475°F.) for five to six minutes. Serve hot.

Easter Fruit Salad—Chill 6 halves of canned pear and scoop out a small part of the center, leaving what is to be a basket for the salad. Next divide 2 small packages of soft white cream cheese into four parts, and, using a small amount of vegetable coloring, tint each part of cheese a different color, leaving one part white. Chill the colored cheeses and form into small egg shaped balls, using one egg of each color in each Easter basket. Do not color the cheeses deeply. After placing one tinted egg of each color in a pear basket, place it in a deep cup of crisp chilled lettuce, and garnish at one side with fruit salad dressing, made by folding into Mayonnaise Salad Dressing an equal part of whipped cream.

Frozen Fruit Salad—To ¾ cup cooked Fruit Salad Dressing, fold in ½ cup whipped cream, and add 2 bananas, diced, 4 large slices pineapple, diced, and 6 Maraschino cherries, diced. Place in deep tray of refrigerator and freeze until hard enough to slice. Cut into one-half inch slices and serve in nests of lettuce. (This is an extraordinarily good Fruit Salad).

Cooked Fruit Salad Dressing—Mix ¼ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1½ tablespoons flour, 1 egg, ½ cup pineapple juice, ¼ cup orange juice, ¼ cup Pure Vinegar, and cook, stirring constantly until thick. Add 1 tablespoon butter and cool.

It Takes More Than Salts, Calomel, Mineral Waters, Oils, or Laxative Pills to Arouse a Sluggish Liver

They Give Only Temporary Relief From Constipation and Biliousness, Because They Have No Effect Whatever on the Liver or Its Production of Bile

Bile is nature's own laxative and your stomach and bowels require at least one quart of fresh bile every day to keep them clean, pure, free from fermentation, putrefaction, gas and disease germs.

When your liver becomes torpid or sluggish the bile stagnates and stops flowing freely. The contents of your bowels become the breeding place for germs and poisons; your food does not digest—it just ferments and decays in the bowels. The blood absorbs these poisons and you suffer from constipation, gas, sick headaches, biliousness, nervousness and sour stomach.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills will remove the cause of this condition and purify your entire system in nature's way. They are not like any other medicine you have ever taken. They are so gentle, thorough and natural in their action that there is nothing about them to remind you that you have ever taken a medicine, and most remarkable of all you gradually reduce the dose until you no longer require a laxative at all.

Five years ago it was generally believed that calomel and laxative drugs stimulated the liver, but modern science has proved that calomel, salts, mineral waters, oils and other laxatives have no effect whatever on the liver.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills act directly on the liver because they contain two amazing substances which highest medical authorities agree are the only effective stimulants to the bile-producng activity of the liver known to modern science. These substances stimulate and invigorate the liver to cleanse and purify itself through increasing its production of bile. This fresh bile immediately starts to work neutralizing acids and poisons, stopping fermentation and decay, cleansing and purifying the bowels and sweeping out accumulated poisons.

Unless you have tried Sargon Soft Mass Pills you can have no idea of the effects produced by this natural cleansing of your liver and bowels. It makes you feel years younger, stronger, healthier and happier. It brings back life and color to faded eyes and cheeks, restores the appetite and sound digestion—gives you a new outlook on life itself.

Insist on genuine Sargon Soft Mass Pills. Don't be misled. There are only two known substances which will actually stimulate a torpid or sluggish liver to cleanse and purify itself by increasing its production of bile. Sargon Soft Mass Pills contain both of these substances and no other advertised medicine on the American market today does contain them.

Only 60c for a full 30-day treatment. At your druggist, or write G. F. Willis, Inc., Atlanta, Ga.

"As I See It"

By Art L. Walhausen

The affable Major, Beagle Eake, wishes it to be known that there is still room on the "losers' bench". Make way for O. M. Arthur, ? ? ? in Ward II, Otis Fahrenkopf, and Gust Zacher.

Another prodigal son will soon be home. His belongings including two grips and a coupla packages arrived collect this week from Pasadena, Calif. Ditty says he went through one quake or a thousand, and that's enough to deal a Missouri boy the Keely on the Sunny Climate gag for which Southern Cal's. Chambers of Commerce are noted. Ditty Kirby is on his way home.

There's one other thing worth while about the election just past. Up in the Silk Stocking Ward, Jos. L. Matthews actually hit the streets, the ball, and what have you. That boy got out, met the voters, got acquainted with a coupla hundred folks he'd heard about, but had never met, and generally learned quite a bit about electioneering. Congratulations.

Over in Ward II, old bloody two, the judges, the clerks or somebody made a big discovery. Sorta like working for $1.00 per day all your life, and at the age of 89 finding that your uncle Yoseph in Swveden left you a million.

Three recounts, three verdicts, then the climax. Forty-six votes had NOT BEEN COUNTED ALL DAY LONG. A recheck is being made.

In Ward IV Otis needed just 23 more customers with unpaid coal bills to swing the election his way. He lost by 22. You know, it's kinda hard to vote against the man you're indebted to. Ed Smith is a veteran, and being a vet, he knew where, what, when and HOW.

Looks kinda that being a doctor and knowing the wimmin folks has its advantages over making flour. Doc Presnell knew some of those voters since babyhood, waited on hundreds more through fevers and chicken pox, and is darn well liked by everybody. Zacher, with opposition like that, should feel complimented to have polled a normal vote.

The Akron disaster will go down in hsitory as another black page in history as another black page four men were snuffed out in the inky darkness and the storm-tossed, icy waters of the Atlantic. The Akron was the mightiest craft of its kind in the world, but compared to the elements that sent it hurtling to destruction, its forces, though powerful, were as a straw in a cyclone . . puny as are all the works of Man when compared to the whims of the Almighty.

One nationally known editorial writer has termed this disaster "The Price of Progress". Perhaps it was. In another sense, perhaps unjustifiable, it is the price of a barbarian state of mind which arms us to the teeth for supremcy in the air against other nations equally uncivilized.

The militarist insists upon "adequate national defense", and point to the "next" war which, it is insisted, will be fought in the air. Hence justification for the Akron and its sister ship, the Macon. The same attitude was responsible for the Roma disaster, and for the mid-heaven crash of the Shenandoah which sent another group of men into eternity. The ZR-r, the French Dixmude, the Italia, and the R-101 might also be cited.

$5,000,000 the cost of the Akron, plus an additional $5,000,000 for hangars, mooring masts, especially constructed ships, auxiliary equipment, and salaries would have operated Missouri's school system for four years . . or have paid for 2000 miles of high-type concrete highways.

It is a pitiable situation. Nations send flesh and blood to destruction, and for ages past grind out political propaganda sufficient to keep alive the spirit of war. The writer has his certificate in military training, and should war come there is only one answer—serve. But it nevertheless seems barbaric that one nation should be pitted against another for the glory of men, the acquisition of territory, or the protection of property of citizens in foreign countries.

We subscribe heartily to legislation and tax appropriations sufficient to protect our nation against internal strife, but we deplore the existing necessity for guarding against an aggressive nation.

So long, however, as one political unit limits its citizenry to prescribed boundaries, and issues a challenge to any transgressors so long will appropriations for superaircraft for offense and defense be necessary.

We are yet far from civilized.

CHAPTER X

When Blondie entered the bathroom she was speechless from the excitement of coming face-to-face with Larry. Now she was almost breathless from the heavy perfume and sweet steam of Lurline's bath. She looked around through the haze for a moment getting her bearings, then spoke to Lurline lolling back in the huge tub:

"Who's that good-looking fellow? He started to come right in here!"

"Oh, Larry," Lurline seemed very unconcerned as she gently raised and rubbed a shapely leg. "He's incorrigible!"

"Whatever that means. But he's larn fresh....he said to me...." But Madelon's entrance interrupted.

"Would you like a cocktail?" Lurline asked Blondie.

"Not me, thanks."

"Run along—then—you'll be splashed. Madelon must rub me down with 'Night Kiss'."

"Okay!" and Blondie opened the door narrowly and slid out into the bedroom.

There was Larry romping on the bed with a tiny Pekinese dog. Her entrance unnoticed, Blondie stood watching Larry. He certainly was handsome, she thought, and he must be full of fun, the way he was playing now. Yes he was fresh....look at the way he was tearing up that nice bed What right had he.... Blondie's thoughts were interrupted when Larry saw her.

"Hello again," he said, pleasantly. "Look at this!" and he made the dog sit up. "Cute isn't he?"

"Very," Blondie had at last found her voice even if only for one word and that about a dog.

"So are you," Larry noticed her embarrassment now, and made a definite effort to make her forget it by being unusually friendly.

"Thanks." Blondie could feel herself blush deeply.

"Thank your mother ...thank your father...." Larry was half singing and pretended not to see the blush.

Lurline swept into the room in her dressing gown. She stopped short at Larry's words and the familiarity in his voice. She looked at Blondie's flushed face, and her eyes narrowed dangerously. Lurline knew her Larry. But there was no hint of resentment in her voice as she said:

"Oh, really, Larry boy—don't recline on my nice pajamas," and she pulled him up from the bed.

"Say, I want a word with you—alone," he said to Lurline, and glanced smilingly at Blondie.

"This is little Miss McCune—Mr Belmont," and Lurline was not too cordial making the introduction.

"Oh, we met before," Larry said, quickly. "Come on—I'll get you a drink."

Lurline turned, quickly stepped into her pajamas, and said:

"I'll be there in a moment—wait in the drawing room for me. Come here Blondie."

"Okay," replied Larry. "Hurry up then, it's getting late," and he left the room.

"Who's that?" asked Blondie.

"Only Larry Belmont—ever heard of him?....stock exchange....smart as a whip....millions....he's self made."

"You don't say—I like him."

"Of course you like him—everyone likes Larry." Lurline was combing her hair, thinking rapidly. Suddenly she turned and said:

"Blondie, I didn't know it was so late—I'm going to let you go now—it's so very late—you understand?"

"Yes, thank you, Lottie."

"Lur-line!"

"Lurline then—it's swell up here. Could I come and see you one day when your friends are out?" Blondie asked anxiously.

"Yes—do. Give me a buzz—it's in the book. Lurline Cavendish, C-a-v-e-n-d-i-s-h!" Lurline spelled.

"Okay—and thanks a lot."

"You can find your way out—right at the end of the hall."

"So long, Lurline. I'm so glad about you," and Blondie's tone showed that she really meant it.

"So long," said Lurline as she gave her a friendly little push toward the door.

As Blondie was about to close the door behind her Lurline called out:

"Here, Blondie, come here!" And as Blondie came back inquiringly, she said: "You can't go out like that."

Lurline stepped to the wardrobe. Sliding the door open she revealed to Blondie dozens of beautiful gowns, hats, and innumerable pairs of shoes.

"Here's a hat," and she handed Blondie a chic Parisian model. Blondie quickly put it on, her face all smiles, her eyes shining.

"Thanks. I'll let you have it back."

"You don't have to," said Lurline a bit patronizingly. "And here's a bit of fur," as she handed Blondie a stunning short fur jacket.

Blondie accepted it with eyes wide and unbelieving. Never in her wildest dreams had she ever thought of wearing anything like this. She dashed to the mirror, throwing on the jacket, and surveyed herself with bewildered admiration as she primped and fussed over the new apparel. Lurline, putting on her diamond bracelets, pretended not to notice.

"You're not going to give me the fur, are you?" Blondie asked incredulously.

"Yes—I'm through with it," said Lurline. Then suddenly her voice changed. "Hurry up," she snapped.

"Okay," replied Blondie, but she couldn't seem to drag herself away from the mirror. She looked at herself in utter surprise. How she had changed, she thought. Then she could contain herself no longer.

"Oh, boy—Oh, boy—I look like Joan Crawford, look!" And Blondie went into an imitation of Joan Crawford: "I'm only a poor working girl, —you cannot thrust your riches on me....' Isn't that good, Lurline?"

"I've met Miss Crawford—she's charming—I've never seen her on the screen though—I never go to movies."

Suddenly Blondie sensed the change the clothes made in her. She felt more self-assured. Her embarrassment and the consciousness of her surroundings were not nearly as great, as she looked in the mirror. At first she had admired the new hat and coat. Now she was admiring herself in them. From somewhere she found the courage to say:

"Lurline, do I have to go? I hate to—it's grand here.' Blondie looked squarely into the eyes of her former pal of the tenements. They gazed at each other for an instant, then Lurline said impulsively:

"If I introduce you to my friends' will you promise not to make any—cracks?"

"Me?" Blondie was surprised.

"Well, about the store and mother—and uptown—and—"

"Of course I wouldn't if you said not...."

"Let me see," Lurline said reflectively. "I could hardly call you a relative...."

"Why not?" Blondie cut in, anxiously.

"Oh, don't be sill...." What ever comparisons between them that Lurline might have voiced were never to be mentioned. From the apartment hall came Larry's voice, talking loudly over the telephone.

"Shhh! Quiet!" cautioned Lurline. And both girls stood silent, listening intently. Blondie's face flushed with excitement.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

There can be no doubt any longer that President Roosevelt is going about the job of cutting down government expenses with utmost sincerity and seriousness. How far he will, or can, go remains to be seen, of course. But he has his subordinates at work in a way that surely is destined to produce results of considerable importance.

Old Question Bobs Up

But there are signs on the horizon which seem to portend difficulties. The President has begun to talk about balancing the budget in ways that have proved erroneous for other Presidents. He wants the budget of "ordinary" expenses of the government to be as small or smaller than the ordinary receipts. As far as that program goes it is not subject to complaint or criticism. But the President, at the same time, continues to talk about bond issues for relief of the destitute and bond issues for reforestation and perhaps some other bonds also. He contends that a bond issue for public construction, for example, should not be considered a part of the national budget.

So the old question again has arisen. If there is an expenditure of government money, raised by a bond issue, is it or is it not properly a part of the budget? President Hoover argued that it was, while he occupied the White House. President Cleveland held the same view. Proposals to pay for the Hoover construction program with a bond issue were characterized in senate debate a year ago as making a "dishonest budget," since it was contemplated that the expense should not be included in the budget.

President Roosevelt takes the position that the course he has proposed places the bond issue in a different category. He considers that government help for starving people is an emergency and that, for the reason it will not recur each year, it should not be considered as an "ordinary" expense. Since it is not an ordinary expense, it can properly be excluded from budgetry calculations.

There is argument on both sides of the question. Moreover, there is certainly a need for extraordinary measures under the stress of the times when hundreds of thousands of persons continue to live solely by charity.

It should be recalled, however, that one of the reasons why the bonds of a good many foreign countries are no longer held to be desirable as investments in this country, is that no one can tell accurately what the financial status of those countries actually is. Their budgets do not tell the full story. The President says, respecting his proposals, that we should look the facts in the face, and that the expenditures are justified. Undoubtedly, his view will prevail in congress, and there will be quite an outpouring of public money in order to do as much as humanly can be done to relieve the distressed.

But from a political standpoint, the program which he has sponsored is looked upon by many observers as leading him into open spaces where Republican fire can reach him. I have heard considerable discussion among Republicans to that effect. After all, it must be remembered, the Democrats are the "ins" and the Republicans are the "outs," and it is very much easier to attack than it is to defend in the great game of politics.

* * *

The fear of war again sweeps Europe. The ghost of a "Mittel-Europa" again arises.

War Scares Sweep Europe

The treaty of Versailles and the changes it made in the political structure of Europe are almost, if not quite, ready for revision.

Europe has had war scares since the end of the World war. Most of them have been manufactured scares, scares produced for a given purpose. But the very indefiniteness of the present fears constitutes the most disturbing factor that the world has faced since the armistice of November 11, 1918. It is, indeed, no ordinary scare that now pervades Europe.

It was only a few short months ago, certainly not longer than a year ago, that a general war in Europe was accredited as being wholly and positively "unthinkable." Yet, suddenly such a war as that has become "thinkable." The challenge is to European statesmanship, for the statesmanship of the continent is weighed in the balance.

In the last month, we have seen Ramsay MacDonald, the British prime minister, rushing—yes, actually flying—from London to Rome, to Paris, to Geneva. He consulted with Mussolini. He met with Premier Daladier in Paris. Ostensibly he talked about disarmament in each instance. But in Washington there is some lifting of eyebrows about that. Official Washington accepts the reports that the subject was disarmament. But privately, more than one observer looks upon the situation as ominous, as one denoting an impending crisis.

It is difficult for observers here to disassociate the situation in Europe from the rise of Hitler as dictator in Germany. No one is saying that Hitler is fostering trouble. But Hitler as the ruler of Germany stands out there in a way that causes European statesmen to feel something of the same fear known to the small boy who is compelled to walk by a cemetery late at night. They appear to be "jumpy."

Besides, the Rhineland is traditionally a potential battleground. France always has been Germany's "potential enemy." That which France won in the treaty of Versailles through the fighting at the Marne and the other great battles still is considered by Germans to belong to Germany. Then, there is the so-called Polish corridor which was set up. That is neither liked by the Germans nor the Poles, and Hitler has promised to correct that situation. France shakes in her boots at that thought.

That is one part of the picture. Where is the danger point? None of my sources of information have been able to put their finger on it, but they feel there is some specific danger point.

* * *

Off the other side of the picture, there is German fascism. It is dominated by Hitler as completely as Mussolini ever dominated Italian fascism. Consequently, it may be assumed that Hitler must consolidate his own political fronts just as Mussolini found it necessary to do when he launched his fascist ship of state for Italy. Further, except for minor moves, Mussolini has refrained from venturing too far afield in foreign matters. This may have been due to a desire to avoid meeting the French in the dark, or it may have been due solely to Mussolini policy. At any rate, it has not happened. So, if Hitler models his program after that of the Italian duce, reasonable assumptions would be that fear of an arising German nationalism is premature and unwarranted.

Hitler's German Fascism

But one cannot overlook the Balkans in any analysis of the situation in Europe. One must recall that the World war was preceded by war in the Balkans. France has continued to exercise her influence in Poland, in Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania. The latter three have been called the Little Entente. No one doubts that Italy would like to break up that arrangement.

* * *

Some observers here, in discounting this new scare of war, feel that MacDonald, of England, is doing a work the equivalent of which never has been attained, or even attempted heretofore. They believe MacDonald is trying to get France, Italy and Germany into an agreement with his own nation whereby the big four powers would rearrange Europe's political structures on a new basis. That would mean complete destruction of the treaty of Versailles, for it was the treaty of Versailles, drafted by our own President Wilson, that parceled out the peoples of Europe into the divisions we now recognize.

MacDonald's Big Task

If that be the end that is sought, peace-loving people must greet it with some semblance of approval in the opinion of those conversant with the ins and outs of European politics.

* * *

The recent arrival of His Serene Highness Prince Damras Damrong Devakul to be the minister of Siam to Washington has created some little difficulty for the folks hereabouts who have to know their etiquette and greet the diplomats properly. The minister is a cousin of the king of Siam, so he rates as a prince first of all, but what else? Should he be called or addressed as Prince Damrong, or Prince Damrong Devakul, or just Prince Devakul? Some one in the Department of State is going to find out. Being trained in those matters, the proper title will be ascertained without the prince being offended.

President Roosevelt got a really big laugh out of advice given to his secretary of the treasury, William H. Woodin, at the annual dinner of the White House Correspondents' association. Mr. Woodin composed, among other productions, the "Franklin Delano Roosevelt March." It was played for the 956 members and guests of the association at the dinner by the United States Navy band. After the band had rendered the selection in tribute to the President who sat in the midst of the writers, Jack Bennie, the comedian serving as master of ceremonies for the occasion, addressed the throng: "Mr. President, I suggest that you say to your secretary of the treasury that he stick to his present job. There is not much money made out of song writing these days."

Many housewives use a pinch of soda to keep vegetables green in the cooking, but super-housewives use a pinch of sugar instead of soda, which not only retains the vegetables' fresh color, but adds to the flavor. Keeping the lid off while cooking is also a help.

COUNTY SHARES TAX REDUCTION BENEFITS

The State Board of Equalization, in keeping with the public demand for definite tax relief, has cut approximately $8,000,000 from Missouri's 1933 real and personal property tax bills.

The Board, which is composed of Gov. Guy B. Park, Attorney General Roy McKittrick, Auditor Forrest Smith, Secretary of State Dwight H. Brown and Treasurer Richard R. Nacy, has fixed the final valuation of those two classes of property for 1933 taxation purposes at $3,286,608,425, a reduction of $400,431,711 as compared with the total valuation for 1932 tax purposes. The new valuation fixed by the board is bewteen 10 and 12 per cent under the assessment on which last year's taxes were paid.

It is estimated that the average tax levy for State, County, City, school and drainage district is $2 per $100 valuation and on this basis the savings to Missouri taxpayer as a result of the Board of Equalization's action would be approximatley $8,008,000.

County assessors placed a valuation of $3,428,411,675 on all real estate and personal property in Missouri and the Equalization Board decreased this amount $131,803,250.

The final valuation of farm lands for 1922 taxes is $983,176,274, a decrease of $153,769,399 from a year ago, while the new valuation of town lots is $1,897,238,184, a reduction of $154,922,698. The final valuation of personal property for 1933 taxes is $406,191,967, a decrease of $91,739,614.

Under Senate Bill No. 80 further relief will be offered taxpayers. By the provisions of this measure delinquent taxpayers may escape payment of all penalties, interests and costs on back taxes prior to January 1, 1933, by payment of the taxes in full by June 30, 1933. If paid after June 30, 1933 and before August 31, 1933, the remission shall be 75 per cent of such penalties, interest and cost. The law shall be in effect for but one year, however, and after December 31, 1933, all penaltes, interest and costs will be restored and in effect for the full period of time since their accrual.

Farm lands in Scott County for the taxes of 1933 were valued by the State Board of Equalization at $5,707,656 as compared with $6,568,580 last year. The reduction is $80,924, or 13.11 per cent. Town lots were valued at $3,804,444 as compared with $3,970,512 last year.

Personal property was valued at $1,424,556 as compared with $1,603,904 last year.

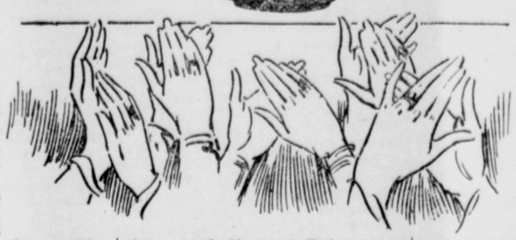
Magic in the Salad Bowl



IN winter when we are all eating heavy foods, we need light salads to balance them, or, if we are going easy on other foods, we need nourishing salads to keep up our strength. Either way, it is often with a properly selected salad that the successful hostess works the magic that makes the meal. So here are some recent tested recipes for salads of both sorts. The first are of the decorative and lighter variety designed to balance heavy foods.

Dainty Salads

Dolly Varden Flower Salad: Arrange five nice cup shaped hearts of lettuce on each plate. In the center one put mayonnaise. In another place four halves of canned apricots, and in another eight or nine pineapple tidbits. Stone ripe black cherries, and put five or six in another lettuce cup. In the last one place about six watermelon balls.

Lily Salad: Pare and core ripe pears, then cut down not quite to the bottom, thus making six or eight "petals," and spread slightly. Place this "lily" on a green lettuce leaf or on a thin round of green gelatin. Place one and one-half tablespoons of canned crushed pineapple in each "lily," and top with one and one-half tablespoons tiny cubes of orange gelatin. Sprinkle chopped candied orange peel over that. The dressing for this dainty salad should be made as follows:

Salad Dressing: Mix together two tablespoons lemon juice, six tablespoons olive oil, two tablespoons bottled lime juice, two tablespoons confectioner's sugar, salt, pepper, paprika to taste, and a few grains of mustard. Shake or beat until well emulsified.

Frozen Symphony Salad: Drain the contents of a No. 1 can of pears, and cut in small pieces. Buy a glass jar of stuffed oranges, chop one-half a stuffed orange fine, and add, with two tablespoons of the stuffed orange syrup. Add one-fourth cup white grapes, skinned, seeded and cut in halves or quarters. Beat one-half cup cream, add one-half cup mayonnaise and a few grains of salt. Fold into the fruit, and pour into a fancy or a loaf-shaped ice cream mold. Cover with wax paper and the tight-fitting cover. Pack in ice and salt till frozen. Remove, slice and serve on lettuce. Serves eight. Delicious.

Frozen Star Salad: Combine half the contents of a No. 2 can of crushed pineapple, one-fourth the contents of a No. 2 can of apple sauce, four tablespoons white corn syrup and one-third cup chopped blanched almonds. Soften one teaspoon gelatin in one tablespoon cold water, dissolve in two tablespoons boiling water, and add. Beat one-half cup cream, add one-half cup mayonnaise and a few grains of salt, and fold into fruit. Pour into individual round or star-shaped ice cream molds, and cover with waxed paper and the tin covers. Pack in ice and salt until frozen. When ready to serve turn out into nests of lettuce. Have a very ripe firm watermelon cut in small wedges and marinated in French dressing. Arrange five of these wedges around each mold, like the rays of a star. The melon should be icy cold. Serves eight.

Heartier Salads

Chicken and Fruit Salad: Marinate the contents of two 6-ounce cans of chicken thoroughly in French dressing. Add two-thirds cup canned grapefruit pulp, two-thirds cup canned diced pineapple and one-half cup nuts, and moisten with mayonnaise. Serve in popover or cream puff shells. Serves eight.

Chicken, Sweetbread and Pineapple Salad: Dice the contents of a 12-ounce can of chicken, and add one cup cold diced sweetbreads, one-half cup halved and seeded white grapes and the drained contents of an 8-ounce can of pineapple tidbits. Season to taste with salt and pepper and moisten with cream mayonnaise. Serve very cold in lettuce cups. Serves eight.

Lobster Salad en Gelee: Dissolve one package lemon gelatin in one and three-fourths cups boiling water, cool and let get thick as honey. Add one-fourth cup mayonnaise, the shredded contents of a 6-ounce can of lobster, one-half cup diced cucumber and one-half cup diced celery (the last two having been marinated thoroughly in one-fourth cup French dressing). Chill for several hours in molds in ice box. Serve on lettuce with a garnish of sliced cucumbers and radishes in French dressing. Serves eight.

300 ATTEND 11 NEW MADRID GARDEN MEETINGS

New Madrid ,April 4.—The Kewanee and Lilbourn communities held their Garden Meetings this week and these were two of the best attended garden meetings held in the county this spring. The good attendance at Lilbourn was in spite of very unfavorable weather. These concluded the spring series of garden meetings in New Madrid County. A total of eleven meetings were held, attended by mor than 300 people.

A further indication of the interest in gardening this year is that 732 requests for the garden circulars have been received by the Extension Office.

CROOKS AND HOMEFOLKS

Again Sikestonians and those living in nearby communities have been flitched—and again by smooth city boys with a clever racket just within the law. We speak of the "Sikston Business College" promotion in which from $180 to $250 cash and about $50 to $75 more in credit was sunk in the past month.

G. E. Bynum and J. R. Thompson were the two promoters. "Schools", they said, "were then in operation in Mississippi, in Kennett and in Caruthersville, Mo." The proposition evidently sounded good to a number of prospects because something like $181.50 was collected in advance fees—representing one-half the cost of the complete course.

Students paid varying amounts rangnig from $5 to $31.50, depending entirely upon the amount and nature of so-called business training desired. Certain course carried certain fees.

And to avoid any stigma of evasion, we hereby include both newspapers and ours in particular, in the list of Suckers. The Sikeston Herald was pulled for $10 and The Standard for $22.85, including cost of contract forms, office supplies and advertising.

Sheriff Joe Anderson recently took a hand in the matter, arrested Bynum and Thompson, and held the two promoters overnight in jail. Grounds for prosecuting were evidently lacking of necessary papers had not been filed because M. E. Montgomery, prosecuting, prosecuting attorney, failed to prosecute. The men were released, and did operate their school here for eight days. On March 27, a sign on the door of the Old Chamber of Commerce room informed students to come back Thursday. Some of them went back Thursday and again Friday. A few returned Monday this week, but even the instructor (who was also duped) failed to show up.

At the time of their arrest and imprisonment the two promoters had $1.80 between them in cash. The rest of the advance money paid by students had been spent, they said.

A Standard reprseentative Wednesday conducted a private investigation. In co-operation with Sheriff Joe Anderson, it was found that the two schools in Kennett and Caruthersville had also folded up, and the promoters, like the porverbial Arab, disappeared in the night. A stack of letters from disgruntled students in both cities make a near file of information. City slicked!

One representative of the class was perfectly willing to sign a State warrant charging Thompson and Bynum with obtaining money under false pretense. But Thompson and Bynum are long gone, and evidently still going. The summary reads like this: Anderson criticised by those now duped for arresting the two fakers in the first place; Dr. H. L. Smith, landlord and owner of the building housing the "school", loser with rent money. Students parted from hard-earned money amounting to about $180; and two sadder and wiser newspaper business managers.

Two or three of the former Sikeston Business College students have expressed a desire to continue the course under the direction of a local teacher, Miss Daisy Evans, commercial teacher at the local high school. They were willing, they said, to pay her what they would otherwise have paid the S. B. C. promoters. School authorities including Roy V. Ellise, superintendent, would gladly assist in working out a solution, and to him we therefore direct inqueries regarding a continuation of the course.

ENDEAVOR GROUPS HOLD JOINT MEETINGS SUNDAY

Walter Weekly, president of the Southeast Missouri District Christian Endeavor Association, Elmer Poage, vice president, Miss Mamyejean Wilbur, treasurer, and Kemper Bruton attended a joint meeting of Malden and Campbell societies last Sunday at Malden. About 160 representatives of various Endeavor Societies were present, according to a member of the local delegation. It is the plan of district officers to hold similar joint meetings every third Sunday. The next will be held April 23 at Kennett, with representatives from that city, Senath and Cardwell in attendance.

EXCERPT FROM A LECTURE ON CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Entitled

Christian Science and the Law of Divine Provision

By Paul Stark Seeley, C. S. B., of Portland, Oregon, member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, given recently in Eighth Church of Christ, Scientist, St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Seeley spoke in part as follows:

In a book written by Professor Charles F. Kent of Yale and Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks of New York University, the authors refer to the thoughts of God as more potent than gravity and dynamite. Christian Science is making practical use of these divine thought-forces, and with most beneficial results.

Some time ago Henry Ford was quoted as saying: "You cannot conquer the material plane from that level; you must go up one step into the plane of mind. The conquest is always from above."

Christian Science teaches that the real individuality of man exists as the effect of a power and intelligence which it defines as divine Mind.

As we learn to turn thought to God, the one intelligent cause, first, and let our thinking express more of the thoughts of real Mind, we find our life's work is directed into constructive channels and our needs intelligently provided for.

When we deny matter and evil as real and affirm the reality of God, good, we do so because we are willing to place more trust in God than in matter and evil. It is ignorance of God that makes trust in Him difficult. Christian Science is removing this ignorance.

A Christian Scientist was once confronted with the necessity of making certain decisions to determine a business policy. He was very fearful that he might not make those decisions wisely and that serious consequences might follow a mistake. He realized that fear was that from which he most needed to be free, he saw that the fear was the result of a blind, unreasonable belief that there was an evil power which could make him think erroneously. When he saw himself as a God-trusting man the misconception of himself as an evil-fearing man was displaced. The two concepts were mutually exclusive. With the fear gone, his thought was open for God's intelligent direction and control, and the solution of the problem quickly appeared.

The material sense of selfhood and all its unhappy conditions are the outcome of what Christian Science calls mortal mind, which is the very opposite of God, true Mind, and all His intelligent work. This mortal mind really is not Mind, for it lacks intelligence. This is apparent when we look at its products, fear, hate, greed, cruelty, failure, poverty, sin, disease. Can you associate any of these with intelligence? Of course not. Whatever lacks intelligence as its cause Christian Science teaches is negative and lacks true substance. It does not belong to God's order or to His man. How is this negative mortal mind and its mortality to be gotten rid of? By persistently denying it place or power in thought, refusing to accept its false thoughts or to give them influence over us, but letting into our consciousness only the thoughts which honor God, divine intelligence. Thus we accept little by little the government and control of real Mind and demonstrate our immunity from the influence of any other.

The child struggling with his mathematical problems may fail often, yet mathematical law has met his mathematical needs. In his ignorance he may doubt this, but the fact remains. So the eternally intelligent Principle, Love, has met every possible human need. And Love has met every human need by making immediately available for each of us those ideas of true Mind which, as we open our thought to understand them, displace the wrong thought-condition we call a need. "Truth is God's remedy for error of every kind," writes Mrs. Eddy on page 142 of Science and Health.

Y. W. A. TO START MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Fifteen young ladies were present Tuesday evening to enjoy the social meeting of the Y. W. A. of the First Baptist church held at the home of Miss Vernetta Smith. A short business meeting was conducted and definite plans for a membership campaign were made. The auxiliary was divided into two groups with Misses Virginia Martin and Dessie Hydrick leaders, each group to endeavor to get the most new members. This contest will last two months, at the end of which time the winning group will be entertained by the losing group. Pill friends were also drawn to extend over a period of three months.

Following the business meeting a delightful social hour was enjoyed with Misses Kathryn Burks, Marie Marshall and Beulah Swanner in charge of the entertainment.

The next meeting will be held with Miss Margaree Walton on the evening of Tuesday, April 18.

Charm Strings in Again

Among the earlier-day customs being revived in the Ozarks just now is that of building up a "charm string". In the years following the Civil War the popularity of the "charm string" was equaled only by that of the "whatnot". And the revival of the string bids fair to become once more of equal importance to that of the "whatnot", which has staged a complete comeback.

A "charm string" for the information of the uninitiated, is a collection of vari-colored, many-shaped and altogether surprising combinations of button, beads, scraps of metal and pieces of wood all strung together upon a thread.

Originally the string was regarded as a charm to ward off evil or enmity among friends, and whether or not its purpose is admittedly the same, one hears in the hills the eager question, "Have you anything for my charm string?

The items which go to make up a charm string, however, are considered impotent in warding off breaks in friendship unless the article has been of some use to the one giving it. A pretty button is undesirable if it has not been clipped from some articl of dress worn by a friend. A bead must have adorned the neck of the gived. And bit of colored glass or wood are treasured only if they came from an object originally used in the home of the owner.

Some "charm strings" really are beautiful, and in these days when bright colors are popular, many of the strings would be lovely worn as beads, for natural artistic tastes often are displayed in the arrangement of the articles strung upon the string.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L .La Cour and children and Miss Ada Mays returned Monday from Louisiana, where they had attended the funeral of the former's father. While in Louisiana they visited the State capitol in Baton Rouge, West End and Spanish Fort on Lake Ponchartrain in New Orleans. They also visited in Bunpe and Lake Charles, La., and Laurel, Miss. They drove 2600 miles on their trip.

Senate Passed Bad Bill

The Misouri Senate has passed a bill providing for the declaration of a moratorium on real estate mortgages and deeds of trust for two years. It also provides that all actions for foreclosure in circuit courts shall be continued until March, 1935, when the cases can be disposed of; that the court clerks be named, in effect, receivers for the properties, to collect rents, pay charges and assess rentals against the owners and occupants of the litigated property. The effort to make it an emergency measure failed.

The bill has no merits whatever. Or, if so, they are minor. In the first place the property would be placed in the hands of the circuit clerk as agent, who would have, possibly, more duties to perform in that capacity so that he could attend to the duties the people elected him to preform. It is not assured that the clerk would be fitted to act in that capacity, but this is not the major reason why the bill should not become law. It is not difficult to observe the bill a bad one for reasons else than above.

A reading of the press dispatches regarding the bill may be seen elsewhere in this issue.

The bill would place a penalty on every one who had loaned money on real estate. It would endanger his interest and would encourage shiftlessness and dishonesty.

A borrower who had failed to meet the obligations of the terms of the note and deed of trust; had failed to keep the property insured, the taxes paid or interest paid. Delinquent in everyway or manner. Nothing could be done under the mortorium. The mortgagor had been too lenient, taking into consideration the difficulty the borrower had in any or many ways; some which he could not avoid and others which he could. With values constantly shrinking, interest charges piling up, taxes unpaid and mounting together with the 4 per cent penalties each year and 12 per cent interest thereon, not to mention the risk of destruction by fire with no insurance, because many such loans do not so provide, what could be done?

The owner seeing all of these debts mounting to a point above the value, no repairs or painting would be done. "Why", says the owner, "should I expend a cent on the place when I'm going to lose it anyway. It's not worth my throwing good money after bad. I'll just stick here as long as I can and then move". He'd be foolish to do otherwise. He'd have rent free for two years, is certain, and how much longer you and I can't tell.

The argument that Senator Donnelly advanced: "If the mortgagors had played half-way decent with the farm owners (and small house owners, too, we presume) of this State, there never would have been such as this". The words in brackets are ours as he had also mentioned the small home owner.

Not every foreclosure, by a jugful, has been brought because any advantage was wanted to be taken against the owner. Insurance and Loan companies have, in a large measure, been very lenient with their debtors. Wherever there was any chance of their getting the just amount they had invested, they have accepted it. That has been the program down here. There may have been exceptions, we do not know.

What action will the Finance Department take when it finds that the banks of Missouri are loaded down with farm loans secured by deed of trust? What action will the supervisor or superintendent of the building and loan associations take when he finds most of its resources tied up in deeds of trust? Does the bill propose to break many of the State's banks and building and loan companies?

The bill is a bad one. It should be killed in the House.—Charleston Enterprise-Courier.

These Are Dinners Men Like

By JOSEPHINE GIBSON
Director, Heinz Food Institute

HAVE you ever noticed men selecting meals in a cafeteria or heard them ordering in a restaurant? If not, try it sometime. For the most part, they choose well-balanced meals and they invariably select substantial, time-worn menus that women often hesitate to serve because they are not new and different. Men prefer the old stand-bys well cooked and attractively, but not fussily served! They like meat and vegetables, but it is especially interesting to note men's preferences in salads and desserts. Given a free hand, nine out of ten men will choose either cold slaw or Waldorf salad (apple, nut and celery). Mayonnaise or French Dressing combined with crumbled Roquefort cheese, served on head lettuce, is another favorite with men. When it comes to dessert, pie is popular with American men and ice cream is a close second. When cakes are considered, good old time desserts such as Jelly Roll are popular. Menus suggested here are of the type that men enjoy:

Vegetable Soup (ready-to-serve) Crackers
Escallopine of Veal* Buttered Spinach or Broccoli
Waldorf Salad
Hot Rolls Grape Jelly
Ice Cream Macaroons
Coffee

Swiss Steak* Sweet Potato Balls
Genuine Dill Pickles

The Obstructive Driver

Drivers have a right to drive at speeds below normal on any street or highway. In driving slowly, however, the driver should keep as far to the right as possible, when there are following cars; thus giving the cars opportunity to proceed by with the least danger.

A great number of drivers operating below normal speeds continuously obstruct traffic and increase danger by driving in the middle of the roadway, so that following cars cannot safely pass. All such drivers need discipling such as will induce them to learn to drive properly. By their methods they advertise their incompetence, and provide good and sufficient grounds for barring them from the roads and streets.

Drivers Who Wobble

Inconstancy of position on the roadway is another type of obstructive tactics frequently observed, which is extremely annoying to other drivers, and a source of danger. The inflexible rule, after having chosen a reasonable position on the road, is to maintain that position constantly; or in changing the postion for good reason, to make certain that no car is in a position to pass on the danger side; and in any case to give ample warning of intention to following drivers.

Drivers who wobble from side to side in driving are, of course nuisances which should be abated harshly. Usually, such serpentine driving is the result of inattention, the driver being preoccupied with gazing around at the scenery, or in talking to or caressing a passenger. Inattention is the greatest single source of accidents, and the wobbly driver advertisers himself as one of the worst of traffic hazards.

Stopping on Roadway

Stopping a car on the highway is always a source of danger, and a great disturbance to traffic. In stopping, the driver should always pull completely off the freeway. If the road border is such that this cannot be done, he should not stop at all, except when absolutely compelled by an emergency. This holds even if no other car is in sight since a car may appear at any moment, and two cars from opposite directions may reach the spot simultaneously. Stops on the road in position hidden by curves or hill crests are especially dangerous. This is a type of obstruction which is not merely annoying, but which jeopardizes the lives of all other travelers.

Almost all obstructive stops are needless. Even with a flat tire the driver can proceed a short distance to a safe stopping place. Most obstructive stops have not even this flimsy excuse, but are made merely to serve the convenience of someone in the car.

JIM THE WONDER DOG MAKES A HIT WITH THE FOLKS IN TAMPA, FLA.

If all the stories about Jim, the Wonder Dog, otherwise known as Jim, a black and white Lewelynn setter belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Van Arsdale of Sedalia, could be laid side by side or end for end they would reach from Miami, Fla., to Maine and back again.

Skeptics of this city which is frequently visited by Mr. and Mrs. Van Arsdale are skeptics no longer. Every critic, and every disbeliever becomes another booster for Jim . . simply because the dog inspires confidence. Seeing is still believing. To make a long story short, Jim and his master spent the winter in Tampa, Miami and other Florida resorts, mainly because Jim suffered considerably from rheumatism in his left shoulder while here last Fall, and the sunny Florida climate was supposed to be good for rheumatics. Get it?

Anyhow the visit has been a howling success. As per an article in the Tampa Tribune of recent date which says:

Jim, the "Wonder Dog of the Ozarks", (he hails originally from West Plains, Mo.), who has won acclaim in newspapers all over this country and Europe, and who will occupy a booth in the hall of science at the Century of Progress in Chicag, is in Tampa, demonstrating to dog lovers and skeptics his uncanny understanding of his master's voice.

A 7-year-old Lewelynn setter, with rich black spots on his handsome white body, and unusually large brown eyes, you will go for him in a big way, if you like animals at all.

Sam Van Arsdale of Sedalia, Mo., owner and master, who has never attempted to commercialize the dog, completely disowns any credit of training, and frankly tells you his history.

Hunts Quails in Bushes

Upon his return, Jim and the master started hunting, and in talking to him in a casual way, Van Arsdale discovered that he apparently understood everything he said. If he asked "Jim, don't you think there might be some quail behind those bushes over there?" Jim would immediately head for the indicated bushes.

This was four years ago. Now, Van Arsdale, the owner of a chain of hotels in Missouri, claims Jim will so anything he says, that he can read French, German or Spanish, translate shorthand and understand spelling.

According to his owner, he is not trained at all. His reception and obedience to directions are purely voluntary on his part and it matters not what he tells hmi to do, he does not fail.

Studied by Scientists

The Paramount Company has made pictures of Jim which were presented to a group of professors at the University of Missouri as an intelligence test for the dog. His demonstrations have been brought before scientists at Columbia University, and Dr. Walter Price of the Psychic Research college in Boston has seen him perform.

But none of them has been able to explain the phenomenal understanding which seems to exist between master and dog.

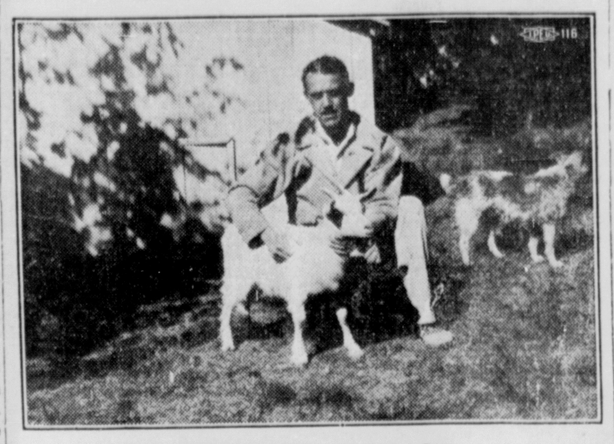
In a doctor's office in Tampa, a woman asked Van Arsdale, "Could Jim tell if there was a mother of twins in the room?"

Of the 10 or more persons present, none knew that there was, but the dog immediately went to the woman who asked the question and rested his head on her knees.

The porter at The Tribune was standing near as Jim was being photographed and Van Arsdale asked "Jim, if we were going to have chicken tonight for dinner, who would get it for us?" and Jim immediately ran to the janitor.—Tampa, Fla., Sunday Tribune.

Jim is going to bring his master and mistress back to Sikeston right soon. They will visit as usual with Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Van Arsdale, and at that time, provided Mr. Van and Jim can both be cornered at the same time, and that both are in the "working" mood—perhaps a few more skeptics can be convinced.

MISSOURI GOAT CHOSEN MASCOT FOR U. S. NAVY



J. Raymond Dyer and Young Bill

The United States Naval Academy at Annapolis has always had a goat as its mascot. No Army-Navy football game is ever complete without the traditional Army Mule and Navy Goat. Each is as essential as the visiting Generals and Admirals.

Last winter Old Bill, for years the mascot of the Navy School, came down with pneumonia and died. Young Bill, shown here with his former owner, J. Raymond Dyer, has been selected as Old Bill's successor. He was sent on to Annapolis last week. Though still just a kid, Young Bill has already shown himself able to hold his own with any mule.

Young Bill, born and raised in Missouri, knows all about mules and how to handle them. Mr. Dyer, himself a former Naval Academy athlete and a winner of the coveted block N, brought him up with mules on his farm in Jefferson County. As Democratic Candidate for Congress, Mr. Dyer hopes after the election to be sent to Washington, where he will be near enough to keep an eye on Young Bill's career as a mule-butter.

CHAPTER IX

Blondie's knees were shaking with excitement as she walked toward the elevator with Lurline. Never in her life had she been in a building like this. When they stepped into the elevator Blondie was filled with awe and felt inconsequential behind the tall, courteous attendant, who silently closed doors and shot them upward with terrific speed.

As they stepped out of the conveyance on the twentieth floor and walked down the spacious hall, Blondie's feet sank comfortably in heavy carpet. They passed in front of an elaborate door which Lurline opened and then stood aside for the tenement girl to enter.

Blondie stepped through the doorway and let out a little exclamation of surprise. She was in Lurline's bedroom and was completely bewildered by the exquisite sight that met her startled gaze. Beautiful furniture, richly colored drapes, appointments placed with a lavish hand by someone with perfect taste, made it a luxurious spectacle that was a fairy-land to Blondie.

She stood motionless in the center of the floor, drinking in all of the room's beauty. Her gaze finally centered on the low bed, covered with an elaborate silk spread of soft yellow. She approached it and gingerly tested its softness. Lurline watched her furtively, with a superior smile.

"Just a hurried tub after the rush of the day; it's such a comfort."

"Isn't it a honey? Try it," Lurline invited cordially. "Make yourself at home. I'll be back in a minute."

As Lurline went out, Blondie sunk into the softest bed she had ever known.

Lurline hurried down the spacious hallway of her apartment toward the living room. She seemed to glide in the soft, rich carpet. She swung open one of the huge glass doors that closed off the living room from the hall, crossed a low, wide balcony, and stood at the top of three short steps, gazing into the lavishly furnished room.

Lurline saw Larry Belmont and another man seated at a low backgammon table, intent on their game. Larry had the dice, and Lurline watched him throw. A tall, boyish looking man, with a serious, good-looking face, that became pleasantly humorous when he smiled, Larry was one of Wall Street's most successful young brokers. Lurline stepped down into the room, and the other man arose as Larry made his move on the board.

"Hello, boy!" Lurline said, as she kissed the top of Larry's head.

"Oh, Hello. This is Mortimer Pratt, Lurline."

The introduction acknowledged, both men resumed their seats.

"How is your mother?" Larry asked. Did she like the cake?"

"She adored it. Sweet of you to remember. But I'm very cross. Did you hang up or were we cut off?"

"Cut off," said Larry, a little impatiently, without looking up. "Your throw, Pratt."

"Pratt!" exclaimed Lurline, manifesting interest. "Oh! The girls were talking about you the other day in the dressing room. We didn't know whether it was twenty or thirty thousand...barrels, isn't it, you get oil in?"

"Sh-sh-sh," hissed Larry softly. "Your move now. Double."

"Thirty," Pratt answered Lurline, without looking up.

"Oh, thirty!" said Lurline started to leave. "I'm so glad to know," she drawled as she walked out.

"Nice?" questioned Larry.

"Nice," Pratt replied. "Your play." Larry cast the dice and the game was on again.

As Lurline went down the hall to her bedroom she undressed on the way. She entered to find Blondie stretched out on her back across the bed, her arms wide above her head, drinking in more luxury than she had ever dreamed of.

"Cocktail time," Lurline greeted, and Blondie turned over to watch her curiously. "Every day the same little gang come."

Lurline was undressing quickly now, and the maid entered the room, going to the black-tiled bathroom where she turned on the water.

"Quel parfum pour le bain, mademoiselle?" the maid asked.

"Now, let me see..."Lurline said. "Your folks liked that perfume today, didn't they?"

"They sure did," Blondie replied.

"La meme chose." Lurline addressed the maid, who went to the bathroom.

Blondie watched her through the door with deep interest as she sprinkled something in the bath. Curiosity getting the better of her, she rose and went to the maid.

"What a smell!" said Blondie, taking a whiff from the bottle.

Lurline entered the bathroom in a satin dressing gown, trimmed with white fox, and Blondie stared, fascinated. She was thinking of the old gray flannel bathrobe her mother had made her five years ago, which she was still wearing.

"Vite, vete, je pressais." Lurline was putting it on for Blondie now, taking every advantage of the tenement girl's curiosity and her own lavish surroundings. She stepped lightly into the tub, and said:

"Just a hurried tub, after the rush of the day . . . it's such a comfort."

"Oh, sure!" And Blondie backed to the door, trying to seem unconcerned.

"Le pajam noir," Lurline said in her atrocious French.

"What?" asked Blondie.

"I was talking to Madelon."

"Oh, sure;" and Blondie went out closing the door. She walked over to an elaborate dressing table in the corner and stood contemplating its array of odd shaped, glistening bottles, when the outer door burst open. Larry Belmont entered, walking quickly towards the bathroom.

"Hey—you—Lurline!" he called. He was just about to open the door when Blondie stopped him. Larry turned at her sharp "Hey, you!" and Blondie stood still, her eyes wide with excitement.

"Oh, hello!" Larry said cordially, taking a step toward her. "I didn't see you there."

Blondie tried her best to acknowledge the greeting, but words just wouldn't come. Never had she seen a man like this—why, he was even handsomer than any of her movie heroes! As Larry, grinning broadly now and very friendly, looked at her, Blondie suddenly became conscious of her shabbiness. She felt completely out of place before this well-groomed man, and in these gorgeous surroundings. She started edging slowly toward the bathroom door, never taking her eyes from his face.

"Oh, please don't go," said Larry, seeing her intention, but still smiling broadly.

But Blondie, yet unable to find words for an answer, kept moving toward the door. As she reached it, she turned suddenly, entered the bathroom, and closed the door tightly behind her. And her heart was beating a rat-a-tat-tat!

THE MESSY DRIVER

(This is one of a series of 14 articles on the causes of automobile accidents, which in 1932 caused the death of 29,000 and injuries to more than 900,000 persons. The author is Professor of Experimental Psychology in Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., and is Chairman of the Committee on Psychology of the Highway of the National Research Council. Other articles will appear weekly.—Editor's Note)

By Dr. Knight Dunlap, Professor of Experimental Psychology Johns Hopkins University

Some drivers are able to be fairly decent in straight driving, giving passing and overtaking cars proper clearance, and otherwise operating their cars safely; but never seem to be able to make right or left turns except in a sloppy, and therefore, dangerous manner. Such drivers, preparing to make a left turn, draw over to the right of the roadway, as if about to make a right turn. Preparing to make a right turn, they draw over to the center of the roadway as if about to make a left turn. In both cases, the result is a turn across in front of the following driver, instead of a turn out of his way. Such maneuvers make it impossible for the following driver to know what to expect, and frequently result in smashed fenders or wheels, or torn bumpers.

Another type of incompetent driver keeps fairly well to the curb in beginning a right turn, but swings out over the center of the cross street in completing it. There is no possible excuse for this laziness, incompetence, or too high speed being the only causes. The same driver usually make a left turn short of the intersection center, entering the cross street on the wrong side. In either case, traffic is delayed and disorganized, and the chances of collision greatly increased. In some cases, the messy driver does not actually get on the wrong side of the cross road, but gets far enough out to block traffic proceeding in his direction.

Making Turns Safely

The only safe way to make a right turn is to edge over to the curb on the right of the street in advance, (having due regard to following vehicles), and then to turn short enough to keep well to the right of the cross street. Similarly, in preparing for a left turn, the driver should edge over to the left, reasonably close to the center, and turn around the center of the intersection. Speed should be reduced so that this can be done. At street intersections where two or more traffic lanes in each direction are marked off by white lines or lines of metal buttons, the procedure in making right or left turns is clearly indicated; but drivers should proceed at other intersections as if the lanes were marked off.

After completing a turn, the car should be at a speed lowed than that of through cars on the cross street; hence, to avoid disorganizing traffic and annoying other drivers, the driver should keep as far as possible to the right, at least until picking up normal speed, so that other cars may continue as freely as possible.

A single messy turn should be sufficient grounds for the driver's receiving a ticket to appear before the traffic judge. Repetition of the offense should automatically entail suspension of driving license for two weeks. Several offenses warrant permanent revocation. It seems probable that with lesser severity, a great number of messy drivers will never learn how to drive.

Behaving At Intersections

There are, of course, particular circumstances, sometimes determined by the character of the intersection, sometimes determined by the antics of other drivers, where the rules for right and left turns cannot be maintained. The intellgient driver has no difficulty in adapting himself to these emergencies, which as a matter of fact are compartively rare.

Aside from the making of bad turns, incompetent drivers in large numbers mess up the intersections protected by traffic lights by stopping in the wrong places. Usually, there is plenty of room for two cars side by side; but the majority of drives have the mania for stopping in the center of the roadway, so that there is room on neither side for another car. Succeeding cars therefore must stop farther back, and where a number accumulate there is needless delay in getting off on the green light. The annoyance to another driver is extreme if he approaches just as the light turns green, and he could proceed across, except that a single stopped car blocks the way, forcing the oncoming car to a needless stop, or worse, leading him to pass on the left, far over the white line. Blocking traffic in this way is direct evidence of incompetence, and some way should be found for compelling the drivers to learn how to behave at intersections.

AUXILIARY NOTES

The Auxilary of the American Legion held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Frank Dye Wednesday evening with a fine attendance.

The Auxiliary is planning a benefit card party at the Marshall Hotel Monday evening, April 24 to which all card fans are cordially invited.

At the conclusion of the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Oscar Carroll, Wednesday, April 19.

MORRIS-SIMPSON

Friends here were surprised this week to hear of the wedding of Mrs. Fannie Simpson to H. M. Morris, both of this city, which occurred Tuesday afternoon at Charleston with the Justice of the Peace in charge. Both Mr. and Mrs. Morris are well known here, and are now at home to their friends at their home on Daniel Street.
